ROOSEVELT FAILED TO GET TAFT PLEDGE

Authenticated Story That He Asked Successor to be Neutral in Cannon Fight.

APPROVED INSURGENT PLAN

Said Speaker Had Balked Him—Sounded Taft and Found Him Opposed to the Rebels.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The hopes of the insurgents that ex-President Roosevelt will come to their aid in the face of President Taft's open alignment with the regulars has brought out a strange but authentic account of the efforts made by the House insurgents to get indorsement for their fight against Speaker Cannon from the retiring President. This revelation throws an interesting light on Mr. Roosevelt's information concerning his successor's political leanings even before Mr. Taft took office.

Shortly before March 4 the insurgents concluded that Mr. Taft was turning from them in their fight on the Speaker, and Messrs. Madison, Gardner, and Nelson were sent to call on Mr. Roosevelt. They called on March 3—the day before Mr. Taft's inauguration. As to their plans Mr. Roosevelt agreed with them heartily.

"Cannon," he said, "has been the greatest obstacle in the way of my efforts to obtain good legislation for the country throughout the seven years of my Administration."

When it came to his taking an active hand in the fight he hesitated. Throwing himself back in a characteristic attitude he said, looking at the ceiling:

"Now, boys, let me think out loud."

He set forth his relations with the Speaker, and the Speaker's relations to legislation, but ended by merely promising to sound his successor on the subject.

"I'll tap him and then report," he said.

The next day the retiring and the incoming Presidents were at the Capitol surrounded by a host of politicians and diplomats. Mr. Roosevelt sent a page, and summoned the three insurgents. As the insurgents entered the President's room Mr. Roosevelt led them aside.

"I've tapped him," he told them, bluntly, "and he is 'agin' you."

It is said that later that day Mr. Roosevelt led two of the insurgents to Mr. Taft, and begged him at least to keep hands off in the coming fight. According to this account, Mr. Taft received the plea good-humoredly, and laughed over the earnestness of his predecessor.

ROOSEVELTS AT ST. GEORGE'S.

The Verger, Not Recognizing Them, Tells Them of Roosevelt Marriage.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—Ex-President Roosevelt is nominally resting, but his activities to-day made Londoners wonder, if this is rest for him, what a characteristically "strenuous" day is like.

Before his reception by Queen Alexandra and the Dowager Empress Marie at Buckingham Palace the Colonel spent over an hour at the South Kensington Natural History Museum with Messrs. Cunninghame and Selous, both mighty hunters before the Lord, and Mr. Roosevelt's South Dakota companion, Seth Bullock. The ex-President discussed the exhibits with the curator with great animation.

In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt made a sentimental journey to St. George's Church, Hanover Square, where they were married twenty-three and a half years ago. Kermit and Ethel Roosevelt accompanied their parents. The following story is told of this visit:

Mr. Roosevelt did not wish to be recognized, for fear that a curious crowd would assemble and watch his movements. When he walked into the empty church shortly after 4 o'clock he had taken off his glasses, and the verger did not recognize him. The party wandered about the church for half an hour, and then visited the vestry.

Mr. Roosevelt asked to see the register, in order to point out the entry of his marriage to his children. Unfortunately the clerk was absent and the marriage register was under lock and key, so he was invited to come back again. "There are three very interesting entries in the register," said the verger. "The late King and Queen Alexandra and the present King and Queen signed as witnesses at one marriage. Then we have the signatures of three Prime Ministers, Gladstone, Rosebery, and Balfour, at the marriage of a fourth Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith. Also we have the signature of Mr. Roosevelt, former President of the United States, who was married here twenty-three years ago."

His hearers showed mild interest in this announcement.

"Many Americans come here solely to see the entry," continued the verger. "We keep a sheet of papr inserted at the page, with a cutting from a newspaper of that day, which describes how Mr. Roosevelt came her from Long's Hotel wearing a bowler hat, how he entered by the back door, and was married, in the simplest manner possible."

Mr. Roosevelt and his family thanked the verger for this very interesting information, and left the church without disclosing their identity.

"I never realized it was Mr. Roosevelt," said the verger afterward.

LONDON, May 24.—Ex-President Roosevelt spent a busy but quiet day. His movements about London were not made

PRIEST RUNS AWAY AND WEDS.

His Bride Is the Daughter of a Trenton, N. J., Waiter.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 24.—Friends here of Miss Katherine Johann, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franz Johann of 121 Chancery Street, and of Father Alphonse M. Consolazio, a Catholic priest, were astonished to-day to learn of the marriage of the priest and the girl at the home of a friend in Atlantic City last night. The information came in the form of a telegram from the girl to her parents. In it she said:

> Our wishes are accomplished. We are married. Kisses and regards, > KATHERINE.

It was learned that Miss Johann and the priest had left here on the 4:27 o'clock train for Atlantic City yesterday, going to the home of a friend of Miss Johann at 44 North Maryland Avenue. There, it is believed, the marriage was performed.

Father Consolazio had been attentive to Miss Johann for some time, and members of the church had called the affair to the attention of Bishop McFaul, who began an investigation. Two weeks ago Father Consolazio disappeared, it is said. This morning Bishop McFaul authorized the following statement:

"In regard to the reported marriage of a Roman Catholic priest at Atlantic City yesterday, the Bishop has nothing to say except that certain rumors were under investigation when the priest disappeared. This was about two weeks ago, and since that time Bishop McFaul has heard nothing from the man, nor does he know of the reported marriage."

Miss Johann was an accomplished pianist. She is the daughter of "Franz," a waiter in this city, who for thirty years has been known to everybody in political life.

PRIEST WARNS A WOMAN.

Tells Her Publicly at Mass That She Must Let a Married Man Alone.

A drastic method has been adopted by the Rev. Patrick J. Hannigan, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, in the Dutch Kills section of Long Island City, to reclaim an erring member of his parish.

In an address delivered to his congregation at 10 o'clock mass on Sunday morning he informed his hearers that the home of a young married couple had been broken up by a young woman who persisted in receiving the attentions of the husband, despite the entreaties of the neglected wife.

Father Hannigan said that as rector of the parish he felt it incumbent upon him to warn the young woman and to announce that unless she immediately reformed her ways he would consult with the law authorities.

DEATH FOLLOWS PREMONITION

Mother of Boy Killed by Auto Had Feared for His Safety.

After accidentally running down a boy with his automobile in a Brooklyn street late yesterday afternoon, Frank B. Anderson of 32 Union Avenue, Jamaica, sped with him to the nearest hospital, where the lad died a few minutes later.

The victim of the accident was John Reilly, 10 years old, who lived at 1,522 Atlantic Avenue. It was near his home in Atlantic Avenue, near Kingston, that the boy was run down. He was playing ball with other lads in the street there at the time. One of the lads batted the ball into the air and Reilly ran to catch it. He did not see the automobile approaching and jumped directly in front of the motor. Anderson tried to stop the car, but it was too late, and one of the heavy lamps on the front struck the boy. He was thrown against the curb and his skull was fractured.

Anderson put the boy in his car and hurried with him to St. John's Hospital, at Atlantic and Albany Avenues. The boy lived but ten minutes after reaching the hospital. Mr. Anderson reported the accident to the police and he will appear in court this morning.

Neighbors of the Reilly family declared last night that for a week the boy's mother had had a premonition of trouble and had been anxious about her young son.

BIG STORM HITS WILMINGTON.

Lightning Destroys Electric Plant—City Strewn with Wreckage.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 24.—As the result of a severe storm, which struck Wilmington without a moment's warning to-night, great damage was done. The city is in darkness, business is at a standstill, and few of the cars of the Wilmington City Railway are running. Many sections of the city are strewn with wreckage.

The storm swept through the city from southwest to northeast. Houses were unroofed, trees uprooted, fences blown down, and other damage done. The tornado was brief but terrific.

Just after the storm broke fire started in the plant of the Wilmington City Electric Company, when a bolt of lightning struck a feed wire carrying 2,700 volts. This set fire to a wooden cupola where scores of feed wires enter. A workman in the cupola was forced to flee for his life.

Before the flames were extinguished the plant had been ruined, causing a loss of $50,000, and the lighting system of the city was completely out of business. The Wilmington City Electric Company is a subsidiary concern of the Wilmington City Railway Company. It supplies the railway with current in addition to illuminating the city.

In the foreign quarter terror reigned. Men and women knelt in the rain and prayed, while the cry arose, "The comet has struck us!"

This cry was taken up by different tongues, and men and women ran through the streets panic-stricken.

So far as known no one was seriously injured, but there were many escapes. Owing to the fact that wires are down the damage throughout the State is not known.

PENNSYLVANIA STORM SWEPT.

Two Killed by Lightning—Telegraph Wires Down—Other Damage.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—The unsettled weather in Eastern and Central Pennsylvania the last several days culminated this afternoon and to-night in the worst electrical storm of the season, nearly every part of the State being visited by severe disturbances.

Stanley Sevitsky and Joseph Tulock were instantly killed by lightning while returning from a coal mine at Mount Carmel.

The storm in several sections was accompanied by hail, especially in Harrisburg, and heavy rains. Telegraph service was seriously interrupted.

FIRE TRUCK KILLS AN AGED PHYSICIAN

Engine Tender Runs Down Dr. Driggs on the Way to a Blazing Auto Bus.

WHEELS PASS OVER HEAD

Gasoline Exploded While Chauffeur Was Refilling Tank at Broadway and Seventy-second Street.

An explosion of gasoline being poured into the tank of a Fifth Avenue auto bus and the resulting fire were indirectly associated with the death of Dr. Hiram Driggs of 108 West Seventy-third Street late yesterday afternoon. The physician, who for the last two years had been purchasing agent for the Valvoline Oil Company of 11 Broadway, was run over and killed by the tender of Engine Company 40, which with other fire apparatus was responding to the alarm sent in when the auto bus caught fire.

The bus, owned by the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, ran out of gasoline at Seventy-first Street and Broadway, and as the company has a supply station there the chauffeur, who said he was Thomas Kinney of 554 East Fifty-fourth Street, stopped the bus and began to fill the tank. The chauffeur was in the act of pouring the gasoline into the empty tank when a sharp explosion occurred. An instant later a sheet of flame shot upward from the tank, and the passengers began to scream. There was a general scramble from the bus, the forward part of which appeared to be enveloped in flames. None of the passengers was injured, but the chauffeur was burned slightly upon the hands and his hair was singed. It was at this time that some one turned in an alarm of fire from Seventy-second Street and Broadway.

Dr. Driggs had just left the Subway station there, and was crossing to the east sidewalk of Amsterdam Avenue, when the tender of Engine 40 swept down upon him. The driver had not been able to find the fire on reaching the corner, but on turning the tender had caught sight of the smoking bus a block away.

The horses were running when the pole of the tender struck the aged physician. He was thrown to the pavement, and the wheels passed over his head. Patrolman Kear of the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station saw the accident and immediately called an ambulance from Flower Hospital. The physician was dead when it arrived. Dr. Driggs's family was at once notified.

When the fire apparatus reached the auto bus the flames had been extinguished. One theory for the explosion was that some one had tossed a cigarette near the mouth of the tank while the gasoline was being poured in. The driver of the tender, Fireman Ernest P. Callen of 1,001 Van Alst Avenue, Astoria, L. I., was not arrested, as the police regarded the accident as unavoidable.

Dr. Driggs was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1854. He retired from active practice two years ago, and has since been purchasing agent for the oil company. He is survived by his widow, four sons, and two daughters.

AUTOS OVERTURN; TWO DIE.

Six Injured—Wheels Burst in Two Mishaps—Car Turns Turtle.

UTICA, May 24.—Joseph Knapp of Auburn was instantly killed and several others seriously hurt in an automobile accident near the village of Vernon early this evening. The machine was owned by James Dey of Syracuse, a member of the firm of Dey Brothers, and was occupied by Mr. Dey, Thomas E. Clay of Syracuse, Mr. Knapp, and a colored chauffeur.

The car was speeding westward about forty miles an hour when a wheel broke. The automobile overturned and then swerved around, hurling the occupants in different directions. The chauffeur was badly hurt, while the two Syracusans were severely bruised. The body of Mr. Knapp and the injured were removed to Oneida.

MANCHESTER, N. H., May 24.—An automobile going, it is alleged, fifty miles an hour turned turtle near Darrah Brook, in the town of Merrimack, late this afternoon, killing the chauffeur, W. J. Gould of Orange, Mass., and injuring the other four occupants, including Robert Schneider of this city, owner of the machine.

Gould was Assistant Superintendent of an automobile factory in Orange, from which the machine had just been purchased.

ISAAC A. HOPPER NEAR DEATH.

Priest Administers the Sacrament to Former Tammany District Leader.

Isaac A. Hopper, former Tammany leader of the Thirty-first Assembly District; Superintendent of Buildings under Mayor McClellan, and President of the Empire City Savings Bank, is seriously ill of heart trouble at his home, 165 West 122d Street. His condition became critical on Sunday, and two physicians were called.

On Monday the Rev. Father McMullin of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church was called to administer the sacrament, and last night Mr. Hopper was attended by Father Quinn of the same church. His condition was said to be somewhat improved, but is still serious.

Mr. Hopper was long President of the Harlem Democratic Club. He built the foundation for the new Custom House, the Third Avenue Bridge over the Harlem River at 129th Street, and the West 125th Street Police Station.

BOURNE IN WHITE FLANNELS.

And Other Like Harbingers of Summer Appear in Senate and House.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The most conspicuous figure in the Senate to-day was Senator Bourne in a new white flannel suit. It was the first sign of Summer in the upper branch of Congress, and those who gazed upon the Oregon statesman were reminded that the session was on the wane.

"Go tell Jonathan Bourne that he is not in a Summer garden," said Senator Curtis to a page when the Oregonian appeared. Mr. Bourne answered the message in person.

Vice President Sherman and other Senators were also in cool attire, but none of them attracted the attention Senator Bourne did. The mercury lingered around 80 degrees in both Senate and House, and these Senators and members who were still wearing their frock coats appeared uncomfortable.

THREE BOYS DROWN IN A BATTERY SLIP

Two Rescued at the Last Gasp by Longshoremen, Who Dive In to Save Them.

FIVE UPSET, FROM A RAFT

It Turned Over with Them and They Failed to Cling to It—The Three Drowned All Italians—Bodies Lost.

The capsizing of a small craft in the waters of the East River close to the bulkhead of James Slip last night was responsible for the deaths of three little Italian boys by drowning and the narrow escape of two others, who were taken out unconscious.

The children rescued were seven-year-old Antonio Cartolo of 115 Cherry Street, and his brother Joseph, aged 5. The identity of the three drowned was not learned because the rescued youngsters suffered too much from shock and submersion to give a connected account of the accident. Late at night the harbor police were dragging the river near James Slip for the bodies.

The first known of the triple drowning was when John McGrath of 319 Water Street and Michael Lancey of 15 James Slip, older boys than the victims, rushed to Patrolman Smith in South Street, saying they had seen a raft with five boys on it capsize in the river off James Slip.

Boys and policeman raced to the bulkhead near the slip. There two longshoremen—James Burke of 129 Beekman Street and Edward Murphy of 165 Park Row—were working over the Cartolo brothers, who were lying on the bulkhead partly conscious and with dripping clothes. The longshoremen had heard the cries of the drowning children and had hurried from a neighboring pier. When they reached the James Slip only the Cartolo boys struggling in the water were in sight. Burke and Murphy had plunged in and rescued the brothers just as they were on the point of sinking.

Policeman Smith scanned the black surface of the river, but the other three children were nowhere in sight. The longshoremen assured him they must have been drowned. The capsized raft was well out from the bulkhead when Smith arrived, and he came to the conclusion that one or more of the three missing boys had been caught under it.

Late last night no reports of missing children had been made at the Oak Street Station. The raft that caused the fatalities is a small one. It is supposed that the five boys gathered on it at one end and so caused it to turn over.

DIAMOND IMPORTS HEAVY.

Valuation of Gems Exceeds That of Any Previous Year, Being $44,000,000.

Imports for the fiscal year ended June 30 will exceed in value importations of diamonds, pearls, and other precious stones in all previous years, according to a statement made yesterday by a large Maiden Lane importer. A general revival in business conditions is reflected in the importation of gems during the past ten months, when nearly $40,000,000 worth were brought into this city. Dealers are able to make from this a pretty close estimate of the total value of the entries for the fiscal year. The gems received thus far this month indicate that the May imports will increase the total for the year by more than $2,000,000.

The heaviest previous importations were for 1906, when $41,100,000 were received, and for 1907, when the total entries were valued at $40,200,000. The New York importer estimated that the twelve months ended with June will show a valuation above $44,000,000.

It was explained that the enormous figures for the earlier months of the year were brought about by the fact that retail jewelers throughout the country had depleted their stocks during the previous year, when there was little demand for diamonds and precious stones. The July imports were occasioned in part, it was said, by the fear of an advance in the duty on diamonds under the new tariff. The months of July and October alone showed nearly as great a valuation of diamond imports as the entire year of 1908, when the total reached only a little more than $12,000,000.

The increase in the valuation of the gems received during the past year does not indicate a proportionate increase in the quantity, as prices have been constantly advancing during that time.

Of the total last month the value of the cut precious stones and pearls was placed at $1,902,857, and the uncut at $608,276, indicating that the greatest part of the increase was in uncut stones.

CONDEMN JEWISH CARICATURE

Southern Hebrews Pass Strong Resolution Against the Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., May 24.—A strongly worded resolution was submitted this afternoon at the District Grand Lodge, No. 5, B'nai B'rith, the leading Jewish organization of the South, condemning the caricaturing of the Jewish race on the stage and in the magazines. It was passed by an overwhelming majority despite a strong fight waged in opposition. A spirited debate arose, one side holding it the part of wisdom to ignore the matter. One delegate vehemently declared that no opportunity should be lost to make known the objections of the order to a practice which "has touched almost the hearts' blood of our people."

The Grand Lodge, which opened yesterday and closed to-night, was attended by delegates from Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

CURTISS WILL TRY TO FLY FROM ALBANY

Plans to Start in His Biplane To-morrow to Come Down the River to New York.

LONG FLIGHT OVER WATER

150 Miles to Albany by River, Approximately—Paulhan, with 141, Holds the Record Now.

Glenn H. Curtiss, the aeroplanist, will attempt to-morrow to fly in his biplane from Albany to this city, making only one stop on the way. The proposed flight is the most ambitious undertaken by an aeroplanist over water up to date. Rivermen agree that the distance which Curtiss must cover will approximate 150 miles, making allowances for the cut-offs he may take across bends in the river. The longest officially recorded flight is that of 125 miles, made by Paulhan on April 18 last from Orleans to Arcis-sur-Aube. In the latter's interrupted flight from London to Manchester Paulhan flew from Litchfield to Manchester, in the second leg of his flight, a distance of 141 miles.

Mr. Curtiss was a passenger yesterday on the steamer Albany in which he covered the proposed route of his flight, and studied the air currents over the river. It was then that he made announcement of his attempt. His airship already is at Albany. He will make the start from there, because the Weather Bureau reports show that northerly winds make up 28 per cent. of all the winds that blow in this region. Mr. Curtiss will take advantage of these in his flight.

The aviator has been making much quiet preparation for his feat. For the last six months, off and on, he has been experimenting to determine the ability of his latest model to alight on the water and to keep afloat there without upsetting. Other aviators have alighted on water before now, but none has done it intentionally, and their accidents have revealed next to nothing that could be of benefit to Mr. Curtiss. The latter, however, has fashioned a sort of apron arrangement which he expects will keep his craft right side up should it drop with him into the Hudson, and by means of which he hopes, in the event of a fall, to be able to rise again.

The additional weight of his safety devices, which will include life buoys, will prevent Curtiss from accomplishing the trip from Albany here in one leg, as he thinks he could do were he not compelled to cut short some of his gasoline supply to make up for the extra weight. As it is he plans to stop in Poughkeepsie for a fresh supply of gasoline and then to continue his trip here without stop.

His biplane will weigh 1,000 pounds, inclusive of his own weight of 145 pounds. It will be equipped with an eight-cylinder motor, developing 50 horse power. According to the aviator, it has a spread of supporting surface less than one-half that of any other biplane now in use.

The start will be made from Rensselaer Island, below the bridges across the Hudson at Albany, about 4 o'clock to-morrow morning if the weather conditions prove favorable. If not, the start may be deferred until nightfall. Should he start in the morning Curtiss expects to reach here some time in the afternoon. A night start will necessitate a stop all night at Poughkeepsie, and the resumption of the flight on Friday morning.

The problem of alighting in this city has bothered the aviator, but he expects to be able to land at the Battery. The high buildings, occasioning conflicting air currents, he expects to prove his greatest source of trouble.

Aside from Paulhan's record, the longest flights hitherto recorded include that of Henri Farman, who flew 136.62 miles for the Michelin Trophy at Chalons, France, on Nov. 3 last. He was aloft 4 hours 6 minutes 25 seconds. Curtiss already holds the international record for speed, which he won at the international aviation meet at Rheims, France, last Summer. Since then he has established several records for quick starting.

A prize of $10,000 has been offered by The New York World for a flight by airship from Albany to New York. Curtiss hopes to win this prize.

ALL AVIATION CLUBS MAY UNITE.

Movement Started to Take Control from the Aero Club of America.

The amalgamation of all the Aero Clubs in the United States on a broad and liberal plan was the keynote of a meeting last night at the Hotel Belmont, when representatives of the American Aeronautical Association and the Aeronautical Federation of America met in joint conference. This is expected to result in the elimination of the Aero Club of America as the controlling factor in aeronautics in this country.

The meeting was the outcome of the meeting of the newly organized American Aeronautical Association, which sprang into existence on Monday at the Aero Club of America clubrooms, when a pronounced opposition to the practical control of aviation meetings by the Wright brothers assumed a concrete form. The meeting was attended by T. A. Hill, Lee S. Burridge, W. J. Hamme, and E. L. Jones, representing the Aeronautical Federation of America, and Victor Lougheed, J. Plew, George M. Myers, and A. B. Lambert of the American Aeronautical Association. No definite plans were adopted, but a plan of action was agreed upon which will place aeronautics upon a plane entirely different to that at present followed in this country.

The representatives of the Aeronautical Federation of America, who asserted that they had the support of twenty-eight affiliated clubs in the United States, compose the insurgent faction of the Aero Club of America, while the representatives of the American Aeronautical Association have the tacit assurance of nearly forty clubs throughout the United States in support of the movement. An invitation was sent to the Aero Club to become a member of the association, in which it was pointed out that it has been decided "that the best interests of the affiliated clubs could not be advanced by conforming to the proposed arrangement between your organization and the Wright Company, and that the future of the affiliated clubs and the interests of aeronautical development in this country could be better conserved by a separate organization, which would not be fettered by the entanglements now existing by reason of our connection with your organization."

A convention will be held in this city on June 22, when a National organization, including the two associations, will be formed and arrangements perfected for the holding of aviation meetings throughout the country. It is expected that at least eighty clubs will join the organization, which will control the aeronautical affairs in the United States.

The Aero Club of America is at present the representative of the International Aeronautic Federation, and Cortlandt Field Bishop, who is now in Europe, is the delegate from America. Should the new association fail to get the membership of the Aero Club of America another fight is in prospect for control of aeronautics in the United States.

NOT A REAL NAVAL DISASTER.

Washington Was Excited Temporarily Because Target Ship Was Hit.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—A story was circulated around Washington this evening that a disaster had happened in the navy, in that a misdirected 8-inch shell fired in target practice had sunk the ram Katahdin. There was some excitement for a time and some anxious waiting for the list of casualties.

When navy officers heard of the disaster they laughed. Then they explained that the Katahdin had been put out in the Potomac as a target for big guns. Probably it was intended to sink her. If not she is doubtless in shallow water and can soon be raised.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 25.—The Times to-day prints a letter from F. J. HE'S WALKING TO THE FIGHT.

Overworked Junior at City College on His Way to San Francisco Afoot.

They used to complain that nineteen-year-old Joseph Brooks, a junior at City College, was too studious and cared too little for the joys of this world. A few months ago he suffered a nervous breakdown from overwork, and his family persuaded him to leave the college and take up gardening, walking, and baseball.

On Saturday young Brooks disappeared from his home, 1,463 Washington Avenue. His family, remembering his nervous breakdown, was greatly alarmed. Yesterday, however, came a letter from the studious, other-worldly young man, dated Syracuse. It read:

> Am well and have plenty of funds. Am walking to San Francisco to see the Jeffries-Johnson fight.
> JOE.

Regarding this as a token of perfect cure, the family has ceased worrying and will let him walk.

MILLION FOR CATHEDRAL.

John A. Kasson's Will Establishes Fund for Church at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—A fund which, it is believed, will amount to about $1,000,000, for the maintenance of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral now being built in the District of Columbia, is established by the will of the late John A. Kasson of this city. It is to be known as the Kasson Cathedral Endowment Fund.

The principal of the fund is not to be touched, and any unexpended balance of the income is to be added to the principal and reinvested. BANKER DICKINSON DIES IN HOSPITAL

Family Denies Suicide and Says Death Came from Gas Fumes Inhaled in Scranton.

BUT THIS IS DENIED THERE

Friend Who Was Present with Him at Chemical Tests Says It's a Fabrication.

Charles Coulter Dickinson, former President of the Carnegie Trust Company, died early yesterday morning in St. Luke's Hospital, where he was a private patient.

The family and friends of the banker said that his death was due to the inhalation of poisonous gas in the course of chemical experiments he witnessed last Tuesday in Scranton, Penn. He was overcome, it was said, and subsequently developed congestion of the lungs.

Directly contradictory to this explanation of Mr. Dickinson's death, a dispatch from THE TIMES's correspondent at Scranton last night said that the statement about the inhalation of gas during the laboratory tests was described by Victor W. B. Hedgepeth, another alleged victim, as "pure fabrication." It was said that the banker was the guest of Mr. Hedgepeth, while in Scranton, but that neither was in any way affected by the chemical experiments they witnessed there.

"It is true that there was an experiment," said Mr. Hedgepeth, according to the correspondent, "but nothing happened to give rise to such a rumor. When Mr. Dickinson and his brother left Scranton both were in good health."

The experiment was performed in Dr. F. W. Lange's laboratory, and, according to Mr. Hedgepeth, it was purely educational. Mr. Hedgepeth and Mr. Dickinson were old friends, and they had mutual interests along educational lines. Mr. Hedgepeth was told that the banker was stricken with pneumonia after leaving

Dr. James R. English of 65 Central Park West, who had treated Mr. Dickinson since Tuesday and signed the death certificate, said last night that the certificate would give the cause of death as acute nephritis or Bright's disease, with pneumonia and cardiac trouble. Dr. English said that he treated Mr. Dickinson on the theory that he had inhaled metallic gas and had been poisoned thereby, accepting the history of the case as told by Mr. Dickinson and his family.

"I was told by both Mr. Dickinson and his family," said Dr. English, "that he had gone to Scranton in good health and returned with the symptoms of pneumonia, due to the inhalation of chlorine gas from zinc in a laboratory there. The skin showed discoloration such as would have resulted from inhaling metallic gas fumes, but aside from what I learned from the family I am unable to say anything as to the quality or quantity of the gas thus inhaled."

When asked whether the discoloration might have resulted from anything other than gas poisoning, Dr. English replied that he could not say.

It is said that the banker carried a considerable sum in accident policies on his life.

The St. Luke's Hospital authorities said last night that the case had been taken out of their hands. The only records there show the date of Mr. Dickinson's admission and death.

The Family's Statement.

It was said at Mr. Dickinson's home, 853 Fifth Avenue, yesterday by a friend of Mrs. Dickinson, who would not disclose her identity, that another member of the party in the laboratory was overcome like Mr. Dickinson and was now in a serious condition. Later in the day Stanton C. Dickinson, a brother, who accompanied the party, said that this other victim was Mr. Hedgepeth, Vice President of the Tippecanoe Insurance Company of Scranton. He also said that the accident had occurred in the laboratory of a Dr. Lange.

Mr. Dickinson said he was led to give out these names, which he had previously withheld, because he had been advised by friends, including an official of the Carnegie Trust Company, that there was a rumor that his brother had committed suicide, which was wholly untrue.

Mr. Dickinson had already come through what his friends regarded as several narrow escapes from death. Last October, while riding his horse Blazes in Central Park he was thrown and sustained serious injuries, including fractures of the bones of the face and concussion of the brain.

Little can be learned of what actually occurred in the laboratory last week. It is supposed that the experiment was concerned with the analysis of coal and oil products. S. C. Dickinson says that his brother was not financially interested in the new process that was being demonstrated, but was simply there on the invitation of some insurance men as a spectator. He declined to say what the experiment was.

Gas Didn't Explode.

There was no explosion. It was explained that it was simply a case of some reaction taking place among the chemicals which was not expected. This liberated a gas of a poisonous nature, which collected unnoticed. Finally it was of sufficient volume to flood out into the room. Mr. Dickinson and his friend were overcome.

S. C. Dickinson explains his escape by the fact that he was late in getting into the room where the experiment was being conducted. This left him near a window when the puff of gas came, and he escaped unharmed. His brother and friend had no such relief, however, and they succumbed to the effects of the gas. It was of such a mysterious nature as to defy analysis even at the hands of the man who had conducted the experiment, according to S. C. Dickinson, for when he was called on for advice in treating for its effects, and asked to suggest an antidote he was unable to do so.

According to the story told at the Dickinson home, the two injured men were hurried to Wilkesbarre, where there was a doctor who was familiar with the treatment of cases of this kind. He revived them to such good effect that Mr. Dickinson, at least, was able to leave for New York the following day.

On his arrival here the financier, even in the weak condition in which he was, refused to go directly home, but went to his office at 115 Broadway, informing his family that he had an important meeting to attend. He was not able to finish out the day downtown, however. When he returned home his family physician advised that he be taken to a hospital. That night he was taken to St. Luke's.

His condition rapidly grew worse. Dr. Janeway was called in consultation during the week, and on Monday Dr. Delafield also. He sank rapidly on Monday, when there were the first indications that his heart was failing under the strain. Various restoratives were administered, including oxygen and digitalis. He sank rapidly, however, and died yesterday morning at 3:45 o'clock.

Mr. Dickinson was one of the youngest men to attain as high a financial standing in the city. He was born at Cobleskill, N. Y., in 1870 and received his early education at the Cobleskill Academy. Later he attended the Cornell Law School and was graduated in 1894. At first he practiced law in Albany. He was the author of several technical works on legal subjects, among them: "Dickinson's Eminent Domain," "Grosbeck and Dickinson's Banking Laws of New York State," and "Dickinson and Cummings's General Municipal Laws."

He Studied Banking.

While he was carrying on his law practice he became familiar with banking problems and became known to the State Banking Department as an excellent bank examiner. His first important post in the banking field was as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank.

He soon attracted attention as an organizer, and was instrumental in putting the Colonial Trust Company on its feet. For some time he served this company as Vice President. Later he was called to the Organizing Committee of the Carnegie Trust Company, and was made Chairman of the Executive Committee, Director, and finally President. He was also President and Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Carnegie Safe Deposit Company.

After the organization of the Carnegie Trust Company, in 1907, he served for several years as President, and then gave way to Leslie M. Shaw, who resigned as Secretary of the Treasury. In March, 1908, he again became President of the company, retaining this post until Dec. 20 last, when he resigned.

In 1905 Mr. Dickinson married Grace Georgette Kidd. He had one son, Courter, now 4 years old. His family was one of the oldest in the Hudson River Valley, and his mother was descended from a line said to have received the largest grant of land ever deeded by an English King.

Mr. Dickinson was a Trustee of Cornell University, and President of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity. He was a member of the Mayflower Society, the Executive Council of the Huguenot Society, the Sons of the Revolution, Phi Delta Phi, the Chancery Society, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the American Museum of Natural History, the Municipal Arc Society, the Cornell Alumni Association, and the New York Botanical Gardens. His clubs were the Manhattan, National Democratic, Cornell University, and Lotos.

public in advance, hence he escaped crowds.

In the morning he was received in audience by Queen Mother Alexandra and the Dowager Empress Marie of Russia at Buckingham Palace.

George Earle Buckle, editor of The Times; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Owen Seaman, editor of Punch, and L. J. Maxse, editor of The National Review, joined the Colonel at luncheon at the residence of Lieut. Col. Arthur H. Lee.

The ex-President's throat, which yesterday was in bad condition, showed great improvement to-day.

When Queen Alexandra received Mr. Roosevelt to-day the two had a long chat, in the course of which her Majesty took occasion to tell the ex-President how much she appreciated the sympathy exhibited for her in America on account of her bereavement.

Subsequently the Queen Mother received Lord Strathcona, High Commissioner of Canada, whom she asked to convey to the people of Canada an expression of her gratitude for their love and sympathy.

ROOSEVELT SINGS OF SPRING.

From Sun-Scorched Africa He Rhapsodizes Over Advent of Season Here.

Theodore Roosevelt, in his contribution from "African Game Trails" in the June Scribner's, permits his mind's eye to leave his hunting grounds long enough to impress this picture of Spring in his native land:

> In this part of Africa, where flowers bloom and birds sing all the year around, there is no such burst of bloom and song as in the northern Spring and early Summer. There is nothing like the mass of blossoms which carpet the meadows of the high mountain valleys and far northern meadows, during their brief high tide of life, when one short, joyous burst of teeming and vital beauty atones for the long death of the iron Fall and Winter. So it is with the bird songs. Many of them are beautiful, though, to my ears, none quite as beautiful as the best of our own bird songs. At any rate there is nothing that quite corresponds to the chorus that during May and June moves northword from the Gulf States and Southern California to Maine, Minnesota, and Oregon, to Ontario and Saskatchewan; when there comes the great vernal burst of bloom and song; when the May-flower, bloodroot, wakerobin, anemone, adder's tongue, liverwort, shadblow, dogwood, redbud gladden the woods; when mocking birds and cardinals sing in the magnolia groves of the South, and hermit thrushes, Winter wrens, and sweetheart sparrows in the spruce and hemlock forests of the North; when bobolinks in the East and meadow larks East and West sing in the fields; and water ousels by the cold streams of the Rockies, and canyon wrens in their sheer gorges; when from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific wood thrushes, veeries, rufous-backed thrushes, robins, bluebirds, orioles, thrashers, catbirds, house finches, song sparrows—some in the East, some in the West, some both East and West—and many, many other singers thrill the gardens at sunrise, until the long days begin to shorten, and tawny lilies burn by the roadside, and the indigo buntings trill from the tops of little trees throughout the hot afternoons.

ROOSEVELT BADGES CHOSEN.

The Colonel's Profile on One Side—Special Seats for Distinguished Guests

The Roosevelt Reception Committee decided yesterday to invite 200 distinguished guests to occupy seats on the stand at Pier A, Battery Park, to hear the addresses of Col. Roosevelt and Mayor Gaynor. The committee also decided to ask 2,500 guests to occupy a special inclosure adjoining the stand. Many United States Senators and Representatives, Mayors of several cities, and the members of the Diplomatic Corps at Washington have signified their intention of being present. It is also expected that the Cabinet will be well represented.

The badges to be worn by the Reception Committee, the Rough Riders, and the organizations which will line Fifth Avenue have been ordered. On one side will be the profile of Col. Roosevelt with his name beneath. The committee medals will be of silver, French gray and hand burnished. They will have a blue and white ribbon, the city and State colors, and the bar will show the coat of arms of the city.

The Rough Riders' badge will be of white metal with a silver finish and have a ribbon of cavalry yellow. On the bar will be the American eagle and the name of the association. The badge for the other organizations will be of chocolate bronze with a red, white, and blue ribbon and the date on the bar. A single gold medal will be struck for Col. Roosevelt and presented to him.

Mrs. Donald McLean, President of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in behalf of the organization, has cabled Mrs. Roosevelt, inviting her to a luncheon at Sherry's during the land parade.

SEYLER CASE GOES TO THE JURY TO-DAY

Brother Denies Statement Made to the Police as to Jane Adams's Death.

PERJURY CHARGE EXPECTED

Other Relatives and a Physician Testify on Behalf of the Prisoner—Women Pack the Court.

Special to The New York Times.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., May 24.—Long before the second day's session in the trial of William Seyler for the murder of Jane Adams opened this morning crowds of morbidly curious persons had packed the courtroom. Those who came over on the train from Atlantic City filled the aisles or stood in the doorways and at the open windows. Women predominated in the throng, gayly dressed, the whole resembling a day of festivity rather than the solemnity of a murder trial.

Seyler was brought into court at 9:30, but court did not open until fifteen minutes later. His little girl, Elizabeth, who was in the courtroom with her mother, caught sight of him, and with a glad cry of "Daddy," rushed up to the inclosure, clambered into his lap, and kissed him. When the child was taken back to Mrs. Seyler she cried until Justice Trenchard ordered the mother to take her from the courtroom.

The first witnesses called this morning were Chief of Police Malcolm Woodruff and Capt. of Detectives Richard Whalen of Atlantic City, who with Detectives James Malseed and Robert Miller, arrested the Seyler brothers in Virginia. They identified a statement made by the defendant at Petersburg, and also one made by Orvis Seyler. Lawyer Gaskill tried to bar these out of the testimony, but was overruled.

The use of the third degree was questioned by Mr. Gaskill, who asked the detectives whether they had not given the defendant drugged cigarettes. They denied the charge. The police denied also that the prisoners had been harshly treated or starved into submission.

The statement made by Orvis Seyler at Petersburg was to the effect that his brother was unable to sleep, and he asked what the trouble was. William told Orvis that he saw Jane Adams back off the pier and fall into the ocean and was unable to rescue her. After considerable discussion the statement was admitted by the court. With the evidence of the police the State's case was suddenly terminated.

In his opening address to the jury Mr. Gaskill outlined the defense. He said that he would prove that the Adams girl fell off the pier by accident and was drowned.

The first witnesses called by the defense were Will Paxson, pier electrician, who testified as to the condition of the lamps on the night of Feb. 4, and Rose Dockery, an employe of the Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel, who boarded at the Seyler home; Mary McDonald, a servant, and Jasper Seyler, brother of the defendant. They all testified that William Seyler was home on the night of the tragedy shortly after 8 o'clock.

For the first time during the trial the defendant broke down and wept when his aged father, Peter Seyler, was placed on the stand and told of spending the evening of Feb. 4 after 8 o'clock with the defendant at the home of the latter and afterward at his own home. They had one or two drinks together and the young man did not seem in the least worried. The mother of the defendant was next on the stand, and there was hardly a dry eye among the feminine portion of the spectators as she embraced her son on the way from the stand.

Orvis Seyler, brother of the defendant, took the stand this afternoon, and his denial of making statements to the police will probably result in his case being taken before the Grand Jury on perjury charges. He denied making a statement as to seeing William leave the pier and of the latter telling him about Jane Adams falling overboard. At the conclusion of his testimony he was taken back to jail and is still in custody.

Dr. E. A. Riley of Atlantic City, called by the defense, not only contradicted the testimony of County Physician Souder and Dr. Emery Marvel that the bruise on the eye of Jane Adams must have been received before death, but said that it could even have been inflicted after death.

The prisoner's wife was next called. She testified that her husband left home on the night of Feb. 4 about 7:10 and returned an hour later. After that he went out again with his brother, Orvis. The next morning he was sick, and Orvis went out for medicine. He then left, telling her he was going to Longport to look for work and kissed the children good-bye.

The case will probably go to the jury to-morrow.

LITTLE BOY DROWNED BABY.

Lifted It to Washtub to Show the Steam and Lost His Hold.

Mrs. Mary Alliger, who lives on the third floor of a tenement house at 123 East 120th Street, took a basketful of washing into the rear yard to dry yesterday afternoon, leaving a few more clothes in a stationary washtub in her kitchen, and her only child, Alice, 10 months old, on a bundle of rags and blankets on the kitchen floor.

When she came back, fifteen minutes later, she noticed that the water, which she was sure she had turned off, was overflowing from the tub. Hastily grabbing a mop and several rags, she mopped up the soggy pool on the kitchen floor. Then she thrust her hand into the full tub to remove the obstruction that seemed to be clogging the exhaust pipe. Her fingers came in contact with her baby. The child had been scalded to death.

The mother's cries attracted the attention of Mrs. Mary Conklin, who lives just across the fire-escape, at 125 East 120th Street. When Mrs. Conklin ran to the window she heard sobs coming from under the bed in her own room. She looked there and found her own son, Robert, 5 years old, in tears, proclaiming that he had caused all the trouble.

He explained that he had climbed over into Mrs. Alliger's flat to play with little Alice. Finding Mrs. Alliger out, his attention had been attracted by the steaming washtub, and he turned on the water. Then he lifted the child to the edge of the tub, so that she might see the running water and the steam and her dim reflection in it. The baby slipped from his hands into the hot water. Her choking cries frightened him and he ran and hid under the bed.

Detective Fox of the East 126th Street Station was sent to investigate the case, but reported that the child's death seemed altogether accidental.

TRUANT "MIDDIES'" RAIL TRIP

They Annex a Handcar, but Are Chased and Captured.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 24.—Five midshipmen of the lowest or fourth class took possession of a handcar of the Maryland Electric Railway Company this morning and journeyed to Bayridge, a disused resort on Chesapeake Bay, four miles below Annapolis. They were seen by a local policeman and the Academy authorities wer enotified. After a chase the youngsters were captured and compeled to return the car, with the upper classmen into whose hands they had fallen as additional passengers.

Lieut. Commander C. B. McVay, Chief assistant in the department of discipline, pursued them. He spread out a line of outposts along one return route and dispatched Midshipman Edwin J. Gillam, Captain of the baseball nine, to establish a like cordon across another. Gillam was directly responsible for the capture. The truants are to-night confined to their rooms in Bancroft Hall under close arrest.

COMET DIMLY SEEN.

Appeared as a Hazy Mist with a Short, Fanlike Tail.

	To-day	To-morrow
Sun sets	7:16	7:17
Comet sets	10:56	11:07

The comet was again visible from Manhattan last night, but only for a small part of the time, during which it was above the western horizon. In the short glimpse caught of it above an electric storm which raged over New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the comet appeared to be a hazy mist, which followed the stars out of the twilight, with just a touch of brighter color in its neucleus. A short tail spread out in a fan-like shape behind it, but this was soon lost in the haze and assumed nothing like the proportions described in the views seen in the clearer skies of California.

One remarkable feature, which was entirely new, was observed in the comet's behavior last night. At 8:25 o'clock, five minutes after it had become visible, a large meteor leaving a bluish streak in its wake flared across the sky from near the comet northward. It passed the twin stars, Castor and Pollux, and then burned itself out. Three other meteors followed it in the same general course across the skies within the next few minutes.

At 7:30 o'clock when Miss Mary Proctor, who has been making observations from the Times tower, arrived for the evening, there seemed little hope of a rift in the storm clouds that shut off the view almost to the zenith. Frequent flashes of sheet and chain lightning, playing through the clouds, indicated that a serious storm was blowing up, and that the comet, in common with all other heavenly bodies, would stay in complete obscurity.

At 8 o'clock the higher clouds began to break, and Jupiter and the moon loomed through. Procyon, close to where the comet was expected, began to shine a moment later, and then came Castor and Pollux. Not far away from them at 8:20 o'clock the neucleus of the comet could be detected, and at 8:30 it had increased in size as the other portions of the head and a short section of the tail came into view. At its best the comet was only half as large as when last seen.

It was not quite so big as Jupiter, and was much less bright, while on Saturday it was half as large as the full moon. At 8:55 o'clock the comet was completely obscured behind storm clouds. Provided the weather permits there should be several more nights when the comet may be seen before it finally grows too dim to be observed.

LIGHT STREAM FROM COMET.

Harvard Observation Shows Jet Toward the Sun—Tail the Other Way.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 24.—When the experts at the Harvard astronomical observatory obtained to-night for the first time an adequate view of Halley's comet an interesting discovery was made by Prof. O. C. Wendell. He saw through the observatory's largest telescope a jet of light, two or three minutes long, projecting toward the southwest from the nucleus—that is, somewhat toward the sun—while the tail itself was streaming to the east, or away from the sun.

Photometric measurements of the nucleus in the coma were also made by Prof. Wendell, whose results indicated that the nucleus was of 6.57 magnitudes, —that is, slightly below the limit of visibility.

The total light of the comet was set at two and a half magnitudes by Leon Campbell and assistants, who made special measurements with regard to this. The tail seemed to be about ten degrees long, but atmospheric conditions probably account for this variation from the observations at other stations, Prof. Wendell said.

Eight general photographic plates and one spectrum plate were exposed by E. S. King of the observatory's photographic department.

Although the comet's brilliancy is diminishing as it hastens away in space, the lessening of the moon's light is likely to make the comet's visibility remain approximately the same for a night or two, Prof. Wendell said.

DEPEW NOT UPHELD BY WAR RECORDS

Show That Spain Refused Up to the Last to Give Independence to Cuba.

MAY BE A HISTORIC SECRET

Washington Interested in the Senator's Statement and Also in the Criticism of McKinley's Character.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Much interest has been manifested here to-day in the declaration of Senator Depew in the debate on the Naval bill in the Senate yesterday that, to his personal knowledge, the Spanish war might have been avoided and that Spain would have abandoned Cuba and Porto Rico in order to avoid the conflict.

The diplomatic record of the Spring of 1898 does not agree with this statement of the New York Senator, and he has disclosed an interesting historical secret if he is correct.

When Senator Depew was asked this afternoon to go more into detail regarding the matter than he went in the debate yesterday he manifested entire willingness to discuss the subject at length, but as he was hurrying to catch a train for New York he was not able to set forth anything material in explanation of the bare statement of fact which he made yesterday.

The interest in his statement was not confined to the historical disclosure contained in it, but also embraced the declaration regarding the personal character of President McKinley, which was evoked in the brief passage between Senators Hale and Depew. It was a question by Mr. Hale that provoked the criticism of Mr. McKinley. He asked Mr. Depew if he did not believe that, if the country had not "been hurried and swept into war with Spain in that excitable Spring," President McKinley could have negotiated Spain out of the Western Hemisphere. Mr. Depew replied that it could have been done, and war would have been prevented.

"President McKinley knew that, too," he added, "but the pressure behind him was so great that he could not hold the country." And then he went on: "But the President of the United States did not happen to have a strong enough personality—"

"No," rejoined Senator Hale, "that is right."

Thus, for the first time since the assassination of President McKinley, two stanch members of the Senate old guard, who always served loyally under the McKinley banner, made public criticism of McKinley's lack of personal force. To the old-line Republicans here, especially those who were active in the party leadership in those days, this action of Senators Hale and Depew was even more surprising and interesting than the revelation made by the New Yorker as to ante-bellum history.

However the criticism of Mr. McKinley is received, there is considerable skepticism as to the accuracy of Mr. Depew's historical statement. In the brief talk on the subject which he gave this afternoon he referred to the Proctor report, which the Vermont Senator had rendered some time before the crisis arrived. It was at once suggested that, if Mr. Depew is now basing his declaration that the war might have been avoided upon his recollection of such matters as the Proctor report, there is wide range for possible inaccuracy.

As a matter of record, the diplomatic correspondence of the time shows that Spain was never in the mood to surrender Cuba or to grant its independence and that the question of Porto Rico was never raised. What happened diplomatically during those critical days was this: The negotiations having dragged along for days and weeks, with no prospect of successfully terminating the intolerable condition in Cuba, it was finally decided by the Administration, at a special meeting of the Cabinet held on the morning of Easter Sunday, April 10, that the independence of Cuba must be recognized by this country. That same morning there was consultation among the diplomats wro were seeking to help Spain out of her difficulty and to avert war. It was finally proposed that Polo y Bernabe, the Spanish Minister, should be advised that only the recognition of Cuban independence by Spain would prevent war.

There was a meeting of the representatives of six European powers that afternoon. The British, German, French, and Austrian Ambassadors, and the Russian and Italian Chargés took part in it. It was decided to send the French Ambassador to, Polo y Bernabe, to urge the sending of a note to the State Department promising Cuban independence. M. Cambon, the French Ambassador, performed this task, but the Spanish Minister refused to write the desired note. Instead, he said, the note promising autonomy for Cuba and "the franchise and liberties granted to the Cubans" were such "that no motive or pretext is left for claiming any fuller measure thereof." The note was delivered at the State Department early that evening.

There followed another meeting of the Cabinet, and the response to the note was given in the special message which President McKinley sent to Congress the next morning asking for recognition of the independence of Cuba and for authority to use the land and naval forces of the United States to end the existing conditions in the island. Within a short time after the reading of that message in Congress the Teller resolution, granting the request, had been passed.

Thus the record shows that, instead of being willing to abandon Cuba and Porto Rico, Spain refused up to the very last, within less than twenty hours of the action which precipitated war, to consider any such proposition.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 24.—The declaration by Senator Depew that President McKinley was forced by the people into the war with Spain was supported today by James Boyle, who, when Mr. McKinley was Governor of Ohio, was his private secretary, and who under McKinley's National administration was Consul at Liverpool. Mr. Boyle said:

"I know that every word Senator Depew said is true. After McKinley's second election I met him at a dinner in Canton. He said to me that the war with Spain was wholly unnecessary; that it would not have occurred but for some hot heads high in influence in Congress and the yellow press.

"He said he had stood out against it with all his strength, and was finally swept away with the popular sentiment for war. He told me that negotiations were well advanced for a settlement of the Cuban matter, with all that Cuba could ask, and they would have been brought to a successful conclusion, no doubt, if the war clamor could have been withstood a little while longer.

"I asked him what the negotiations contemplated, and he replied, without going into details, that they would have given Cuba at least the fullest degree of home rule."

ROW IN HOUSE OVER TAFT.

Macon Objects to His Journey to Winona at Public Expense.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Accusing the Republicans of needlessly prolonging the session and of being afraid to return to their districts "until things blow over," Representative Macon of Arkansas started such a row upon the floor of the House to-day that quiet was restored only when the Chair threatened to summon the Sergeant at Arms.

Mr. Tawney, in charge of the Sundry Civil bill, had just offered for the second time an amendment appropriating $100,000 to create an economy board to inquire into and modernize the accounting methods of the various Government departments. Mr. Macon declared this was nothing but a scheme to provide jobs for the Republican faithful. Mr. Stafford of Wisconsin and he were soon engaged in a tilt, and Mr. Macon suddenly burst out: "The truth is you Republicans are afraid to go home. You want to stay here, in the hope that things will blow over. You are simply killing time."

This gave Mr. Tawney an opening. Mr. Macon had just returned from Arkansas, where he had been renominated.

"We are in the same condition as the gentleman from Arkansas," said Mr. [illegible] [illegible] come back. [illegible] for that reason he went home."

"But he did come back," chimed in Champ Clark.

Representative Macon was thoroughly aroused by this time.

"I will ask the gentleman from Minnesota," he shouted, "if he was afraid when the President of the United States, at the expense of the American people and using an appropriation of $25,000 for traveling expenses, went all the way to Winona to speak in that district? Who was afraid then?"

Half a dozen members were endeavoring to be heard, and Mr. Macon insisted upon hurling other pleasantries at Mr. Tawney.

"No President was ever called upon to go to any place at the expense of the American people to save my scalp," he shouted.

This sally rather disconcerted Mr. Tawney, who, after the Democratic applause had subsided, said:

"In view of the great indignation of the gentleman from Arkansas, I will not say anything in reply."

Finally the Chair threatened to invoke the "mace" to restore quiet, and it had the desired effect.

Mr. Macon's attack, however, resulted in killing the Tawney amendment for an economy board.

Representative Fitzgerald of New York jumped into the debate long enough to refer again to Senator Aldrich's statement that he could run the Government for $300,000,000 a year. He suggested that Mr. Taft would better get competent men to run the Government or admit "he was the greatest failure that ever got into the White House."

NEW RETREAT ON RATES.

Regulars Accept Democratic Modification of Cummins Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The fight in the Senate over the Cummins amendment to the Railroad bill, which provides that no increased rates shall go into effect without the approval of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, reached the point to-day where the regulars, fearing the result of a direct vote, thought it expedient to push forward as a compromise a less disagreeable proposition. This proposition comes from Senator Martin, a Democrat of Virginia, but it will receive the support of the regulars as against Mr. Cummins's more sweeping provisions.

The indications to-day are that a number of Democrats now feel inclined to support the Martin amendment, taking the ground that it merely would expedite and not limit the working powers of the commission. How many of them will stand out for it after the insurgents have finished their assault is not known, but the Democrats have lately shown a disposition not to assume the appearance of evil by voting with Mr. Aldrich on any proposition about which a question has been raised. The insurgents meanwhile are bending all their efforts to show that the Martin amendment really plays into Mr. Aldrich's hands, and by that means to frighten the minority Senators from supporting it.

NO LARGE TARIFF BOARD.

House Gives $250,000 for Inquiries Into Production Cost.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON May 24.—Efforts of Chairman Tawney of the Appropriations Committee to have the House include in the Sundry Civil bill the scheme of President Taft for an enlargement of the Tariff Board and of its powers, failed this afternoon, through adverse rulings of Mr. Mann, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole. An appropriation of $250,000, to be used by the President in investigating the cost of production at home and abroad, so far as provided in the tariff law, and in enforcing the customs laws, was allowed to remain in the bill. As drawn the high protectionists had no objection to the provision making this appropriation.

The House remained in continuous session from noon until 9 o'clock to-night in order to make progress on the bill, almost two days having been consumed in the debate over the Tariff Board.

WYMAN GIFT TO PRINCETON.

Dean West, One of the Trustees, Estimates It at $2,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 24.—Dean Andrew F. West, '74, of the Princeton Graduate School and one of the Trustees and executors of the Wyman estate, arrived in Princeton to-day. He was greatly pleased at the prospect of a larger development of the university as a result of the Wyman gift. He said it could not at present be estimated just what the Wyman estate would amount to, but it is safe to say it will range between $2,000,000 and $4,000,000. It will take until mid-Summer to complete an inventory of the holdings. The Dean declared, however, that there seemed to be sufficient funds available for immediate progress on the graduate school project.

Dean West said that Mr. Wyman always entertained a deep affection for Princeton, and though he, the Dean, had been aware for some time that Mr. Wyman intended bequeathing money to Princeton, he had not seen the will until it was filed for probate last Saturday.

When Dean West was asked what the procedure would be he replied that he and John M. Raymond of Salem, Mass., as executors of the Wyman estate, had notified President Wilson of the bequest and sent him a copy of the will. The Board of Trustees meets on June 13, but the Dean could not say whether or not it will consider the bequest then or later.

PROVES THE THEORY OF ELECTRIC IONS

Prof. Milliken of University of Chicago Declares That He Has Isolated an Ion.

KINETIC THEORY IS UPHELD

Molecule of Air Shown to be in Rapid Motion and Its Energy of Agitation Measured.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—After four years of investigation, Prof. Robert A. Milliken of the Physical Department of the University of Chicago announced to-night that he had isolated an ion and had obtained proof of the kinetic theory. He addressed the Sigma Xi Society of the University. He declared that work carried on by himself and Prof. Harvey Fletcher proved theories long held but until now not proved.

"We have succeeded in isolating an individual ion and holding it under observation for an indefinite length of time—an hour or more if desired," he said. "We have been able to give a tangible demonstration of the correctness of the view advanced many years ago that an electric charge is not a homogeneous something—a strain in the ether or an imponderable fluid spread uniformly over the surface of the charged body—but that it has a definite granular structure—consists in fact of a definite number of specks or atoms of electricity—exactly alike, peppered over the surface of the charged body.

"We have been able to bring forward new, direct, and most convincing evidence of the correctness of the kinetic theory of matter, for we have not only shown directly that a molecule of air is in rapid motion, but we measured the order of magnitude of its energy of agitation and find it to agree with the computations based upon the kinetic theory.

"In brief, the method by which all these results have been obtained is as follows: "We blow a cloud of fine oil or mercury drops by means of an atomizer, and introduced one of these drops through a pin hole into the space between the plates of a horizontal air condenser. The droplet there catches one or more of the ions, which normally exist in air or which have been produced in the space between the plates by any of the usual ionizing agents like radium or X-rays.

"The time of fall of this droplet through a measured distance is observed when no electrical field exists between the plates, then a field of strength between 3,000 and 8,000 volts per centimeter is thrown on, and the time of rise of the droplet under the influence of this field through the same distance is again measured. This operation is repeated and the speeds checked an indefinite number of times, or until the droplet catches a new ion, when its speed under the influence of the field instantly changes, though the speed under gravity remains constant.

"From the sign and magnitude of the change in speed the sign and exact value of the charge carried by a captured ion is determined. The air in a single observation need not exceed one-third of 1 per cent. From the values of the speeds observed all of the conclusions above may be directly deduced."

TRIBUTE TO MacCRACKEN.

New York University Students Bid Chancellor Farewell.

At the final chapel exercises for the year, held yesterday at New York University, Chancellor MacCracken made what will probably be his last appearance before the students of the university in his official capacity. The Faculty and students of the university were present, and the gallery of the chapel was filled with friends of the Chancellor. At the close of the exercises Frederick L. Kopf, on behalf of the students, presented the Chancellor with a set of engraved resolutions, which read:

> To Chancellor Henry Mitchell MacCracken:
>
> Upon the occasion of your withdrawal from the Chancellorship of our university, the students of the College of Arts and Pure Science and the School of Applied Science wish to express to you a tribute of appreciation, of respect, and of affection; of appreciation for a great work done, of which much of the evidence lies in the beautiful campus at University Heights and in the work of the two schools which we represent; of respect for the wisdom, and courage, and executive force that in the face of great obstacles has made these results possible, and of affection for the personal devotion to our interests as young men which has led you to find in our service your chief opportunity.

To this Chancellor MacCracken replied: "Until the President of the student organization a few minutes ago asked me to stay in chapel for a moment after prayers I had no hint that you were to give me this good-bye memorial. I have not been willing to think that I was ready to say 'farewell.' By the present arrangement my Chancellorship ends on Sept. 28, my seventieth birthday, which, by a happy coincidence, is the opening day of college next Fall, and I have been cherishing a happy feeling that I should not have to say 'farewell' until that time, but I know it is possible I may not then be here. Your President has named my work for University Heights and I am not saying good-bye to this spot of the earth, for I have thought of no place else for my home save where I have lived these sixteen years."

POLICE CLERK ARRESTED.

Samuel Cornell Confesses Having Taken $90 Graft from Probationary Policeman

Samuel Cornell, a clerk in the office of Chief Clerk Kip of the Police Department, was arrested late yesterday afternoon in Commissioner Baker's office at Police Headquarters after he had confessed that he had received $90 as graft from a probationary policeman named Murphy. Cornell, who has been a police clerk for three years, is married and lives at 760 Fox Street, the Bronx. He has access to the eligible list, and is in a position to know in advance the result of the examinations.

Several months ago Murphy was rejected as a candidate for the force after a physical examination, but he was examined again and was passed. Cornell ascertained this fact before Murphy had been notified, and he went to Murphy and told him that for a consideration he would have his name put on the eligible list.

Thomas Carrol, Mr. Baker's secretary, learned of this and he caused Policeman Smyth to watch Cornell. On last Tuesday Smyth trailed Cornell and Murphy to a Subway station and there, he says, he saw money passed by Murphy to Cornell.

Yesterday Murphy reported for duty for the first time, and as he stood in line Policeman Smyth identified him as the man whom he had seen giving money to Cornell. Murphy was summoned before Secretary Carrol. He admitted that he had given $50 to Cornell about twelve days ago and $40, the balance of the amount agreed upon, on last Tuesday.

Cornell was then sent for and confronted with Murphy. He confessed. In the Tombs Court Cornell pleaded guilty and was held in $500 bail for trial at Special Sessions. His only excuse was that he needed the money.

Searing Plans a Settlement.

At a meeting of the creditors of the failed banking firm of Searing & Co. of 7 Wall Street, held yesterday at the office of the referee in bankruptcy, William Allen, Frederick C. McLaughlin, counsel for the receiver, announced that he had been informed of the completion of a plan for a settlement, and got an adjournment of the meeting until June 8. Mr. McLaughlin said that attorneys representing friends and relatives of the failed firm, who are supplying cash for the settlement, had informed him that a little more time was needed for working out the details.

Fire Threatens Prominent Tenants.

Fire was discovered yesterday morning on the third floor of the apartment house at 121 Madison Avenue, where Mme. Nordica, Colgate Hoyt, James Roosevelt, a cousin of ex-President Roosevelt, and other persons of prominence live. It was traced by J. F. Cleary, superintendent of the building, to the apartment of Irving Baldwin, who is spending the Summer in Greenwich, Conn. The fire, which started in a lounge there, was soon extinguished by attendants of the building with slight damage. Some valuable books in Mr. Baldwin's library were destroyed.

Neurasthenic Misinformation

is widely diffused because the disease itself is found almost everywhere. When any ill afflicts humanity, quacks and quack remedies arise on all sides. Quite as much harm is also done by well-meaning, but imperfectly instructed people, large numbers of whom believe and teach that neurasthenia is only a mental condition, a form of hysteria, out of which the sufferer has only to be persuaded. Science, however, has found through investigation that neurasthenia is primarily a starvation of the nerve and body tissues of two important substances, albumen and phosphorus, which lie at the basis of all thought and action, being consumed in those processes. This fact—it is not a mere theory—is fully explained in a book written by a competent medical investigator for the Bauer Chemical Company, 506 Everett Building, New York, who will send a copy on application, free of charge. This book—"The American Disease," it is called—contains by way of striking proof of its statements the testimonials and portraits of several distinguished people, prominent in different walks of life, besides references to abundant other testimony of the highest value contributed by medical scientists of world-wide fame. The testimony bears on Sanatogen, the food-tonic, the ideal remedy for nervous people, as a compound of the very substances most craved by the broken-down body and nerves, which it supplies in the form of a soluble, practically tasteless powder to be taken in any favorite beverage. The book, written in popular and entertaining style, taken in connection with the astonishing indorsements which it contains, furnishes simply overwhelming proof that neurasthenia is a physical disease, and is often quickly and agreeably remediable by physical means; last, not least, by Sanatogen.

CHURCH PROTESTS AGAINST BIG FIGHT

Presbyterian General Assembly Also Condemns Persecution of Jews in Russia.

CHEERS FOR ROOSEVELT

Proposal to Reduce the Number of Delegates in the Governing Body Fails.

ATLANTIC CITY, May 24.—The Presbyterian General Assembly made a formal protest to-day against the holding of the Jeffries-Johnson fight for the heavyweight championship of the world. The protest will be sent to Governor Gillett of California. The resolution of protest was introduced by Dr. U. B. MacCauley of Trenton, N. J., and concluded with this:

> Resolves, That we urge all Presbyterians, brotherhoods, and the men in all our churches in every State and synod to utter their protests to the civil authorities in their respective locations in such a way that no foothold shall be afforded for the holding of this fight anywhere in this Christian land.

The General Assembly also passed a resolution condemning the persecution of Jews in Russia. It was adopted unanimously. It read:

"In the name of humanity, and in the name of Him who pitied the persecuted, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America lifts its voice in protest against the wrongs inflicted upon the Jewish people of Russia, which are an offense to the conscience of Christendom. Especially does it protest against the recent edict commanding the expulsion of the Jews in Kieff. At the same time the assembly desires to express its Christian sympathy with the cruel suffering of the race from which, according to the flesh, Christ came."

Dr. Baer was cheered when he referred to Mr. Roosevelt as "an American citizen temporarily absent from the White House."

The proposal to lessen representation in the General Assembly came up for final action, and was definitely defeated. Just before the voting, Congressman W. S. Bennett of New York made an impassioned speech, in which he implored the delegates not to lower the dignity of the church by reducing the size of its governing body.

The Executive Committee reported in favor of appropriations of more than $2,500,000 for the boards and permanent agencies. These appropriations were included:

Foreign missions, $1,163,392; home missions, $703,167; freedmen, $139,679; Sunday school work, $154,518; ministerial relief, $128,597; church erection, $78,612; education, $64,457; college board, $60,371; temperance, $17,768.

SUGAR FRAUD TRAIL IN THE HOME OFFICE

Sugar Trust Clerk Tells of Three Employes Who Kept Sets of Records That Did Not Agree.

PRESIDENT THOMAS CALLED

Thompson, a Former Weigher at the Pier, Describes a Cheating Device Called "Rolling the Ball."

The trail of the alleged Sugar Trust conspirators which the Federal authorities have been following in the hope of reaching some of the men "higher up" in the American Sugar Refining Company for cheating the Government out of millions of dollars by false weighing of sugar, led yesterday from the Havemeyer & Elder refinery in Williamsburg to the Wall Street offices of the trust. It was the first time since the trial of Charles R. Heike, the Secretary Treasurer of the trust, and five of his former subordinates began in the United States Circuit Court that the Federal lawyers had turned their search to the offices of the sugar company at 117 Wall Street, and what they found there yesterday through the testimony of several of the office men, who formerly held positions of trust, seemed to satisfy them.

In the first place the Government lawyers believe they succeeded in establishing that at least one of the defendants had a guilty knowledge that there was a vast difference between the weights recorded by the Government weighers on scales which had been "fixed" by the trust employes and the weights recorded by the city weighers, who acted in the interests of the shippers of sugar.

One of the witnesses who used to work in the trust's Wall Street office told of the part which Bendernagel, the trust's former cashier, and a defendant in the present suit, played in the checking up of the two classes of weights.

Telltale Books Missing.

By the testimony of several of the Sugar Trust's present employes, men who succeeded the former officials in charge of the Williamsburg refinery, the Government lawyers brought out that important books and records which were kept by the Sugar Trust during the period when the Government was being cheated have disappeared.

Altogether it was a bad day for the defense, and onlookers expect that more surprises are coming, for Oliver Spitzer, the former dock boss, who was pardoned by President Taft, told only a part of his story on the witness stand Monday.

President Washington B. Thomas of the American Sugar Refining Company has been served with a Government subpoena to appear as a witness against his former employes. Mr. Thomas and Dr. Samuel D. Hooker of Philadelphia, a Director of the Sugar Company, were in the court room when the trial of Heike and the others was resumed yesterday. President Thomas was not the President of the trust when the sugar frauds against the Government were being carried on. That was during the lifetime of the late Henry O. Havemeyer.

Probably the most interesting testimony developed within the Sugar Trust offices yesterday was that in one room there were three employes in those years that the false weighing was going on, their desks only a few feet apart, their duties being to receive or prepare vouchers on which the Government was to be paid for duties and the shipper to be paid for his product. There were different sets of figures covering the same invoices constantly going through the hands of these three men. At least one of the men testified yesterday that such was the case.

Richard Whalley, who was a weigher for the sugar company until some time in 1898, when he left the weighing department and went into the office of the then Cashier Bendernagel, testified that he remembered when the duty was placed on sugar in 1894, for at that time he was stationed on the Williamsburg piers. He was asked by one of the Government lawyers if Oliver Spitzer spoke to him then about fixing the weights on the scales.

"Yes, Sir, he did," replied Whalley.

"Did you ever tamper with the weights?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Who told you to?"

"Mr. Spitzer," replied Whalley. "He told me to roll the ball. I did so."

No Comparisons of Weights Made.

Whalley explained that rolling the ball consisted of inclining the balance weight on the Government scales one way to depreciate the weight and the other way to increase the weight of sugar. He knew nothing about the use of springs in the scales, the later device used, he said.

James F. Kerrigan, who for four years was a bookkeeper in the employ of the trust, told of the system of entering weights on the books. He said that Bendernagel had never told him to compare the average weight of a bag of sugar with the invoice weight. William J. Mulhearn, who was also a bookkeeper under Bendernagel, testified that he had never been told to compare the several sugar weight accounts.

John E. Thompson, for many years an employe in the Wall Street offices of the Sugar Trust, said that the weights of the city weighers were used in the calculations of the trust, and that figures of the Government weighers were used for the payment of duties only.

"How did you make sure the city weighers' records were correct?" asked Winfred Dennison, one of the prosecuting attorneys.

"I would send them over to Mr. Bendernagel," said Mr. Thompson.

"Did they come back with notes on them?"

"Yes, Sir." The defendant's lawyers objected to this and it was excluded.

The city weighers' returns, Mr. Thompson explained, were used in the payment of the sugar shippers. There was a period following November, 1907, when the Government raid on the Havemeyer & Elder docks of the Sugar Trust was made, that the losses in sugar weights from the invoice weights substantially stopped. Mr. Thompson remembered it very well. He said that he used to advise Bendernagel, prior to November, 1907, whenever there was more than a 2 per cent. loss in weight. He said he told Mr. Bendernagel about the cessation of the weight shortage after November, 1907.

"What did he say?" asked the Government lawyer.

"He didn't say anything," replied Thompson.

"Who directed you to call up Mr. Bendernagel with reference to loss of weight?" asked John B. Stanchfield when it came time to cross-examine.

"H. O. Havemeyer," said Thompson.

"Did you ever have any communication with Mr. Heike in regard to weights?"

"No, I had no communication with him at all." Mr. Stanchfield also wanted to know if Thompson, during his experience in the Wall Street office, ever knew of any fraudulent acts on the sugar docks. Thompson said he never did.

Ocean Carriers May Have Lost.

George H. Becker, also an old employe of the Sugar Trust, who served many years in the Wall Street offices, took the stand. It was his duty to receive the reports on the invoice weights from the refinery. He was asked if both the city weighers' weights and the Government weights were in his office, and he said they were.

"Did you ever compare those weights?" asked Mr. Dennison.

"No, Sir," replied Becker.

There was a time, the witness said, when all freight was paid for on the basis of the customs weights. Although no reference was made to the steamship companies having been the sufferers because of this old system, there was the inference that they, as well as the Government, might have failed to receive the full amounts due them.

That was as far as the Government lawyers penetrated into the secrets of the Wall Street offices yesterday, and when Becker left the stand they turned their attention again to the Williamsburg Refinery pier and those signal lights which were installed to warn the checkers that Government agents were around. William H. Wright of Great Barrington, Mass., an electrical engineer for the sugar company, said that he had installed the signal lights at the refinery. They were placed at the scale houses and there were several switches by which they could be operated. He said that while he was installing the signal lights Gerbracht, the former refinery boss, who is now on trial with Heike and the others, walked up the gangway and placed his hand on Wright's shoulder.

"Bill, what's that switch for?" he said, according to Wright.

"It is a switch for signal lights in the scale houses," Wright says he replied.

The lawyers for the defense tried to lessen the force of this by getting Wright to admit that he was not sure he told Gerbracht that the switch was for signal lights.

"I am pretty sure that I told him that," said Wright.

Tells of the Missing Records.

Then came the testimony about the missing books and records. Harry A. Morgan, the present cashier, who succeeded Bendernagel at the Havemeyer & Elder refinery in November, 1909, said that when he took over the cashier's office he made an ineffectual search for certain technical statements.

"I could find no technical statements prior to the first month of 1908," said Mr. Morgan.

"After you succeeded Bendernagel did you discover the absence of any other records from your office relating to its conduct?" asked Felix Frankfurter of counsel for the Government.

"I found that more or less books were absent from the refinery," said Mr. Morgan.

John F. Poole, Superintendent of the Havemeyer & Elder refinery, who succeeded Gerbracht in November last, also testified that he had searched for letters and letter-press books in his office.

"Everything was missing," he said. "There was no record of correspondence at all. There was a file for incoming letters, but," said Mr. Poole, "it had been divested of all important papers." He, with Mr. Morgan, made a search for the technical statements, but up to yesterday he had been unable to locate them. Mr. Frankfurter wanted to know if he searched for certain letters from Secretary Treasurer Heike to Gerbracht, but Mr. Poole could not remember about that.

Mr. Frankfurter called the attention of the court to the fact that a subpoena had been served on the American Sugar Refining Company, also on the American Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey, for the production of the technical statements. Mr. Freeman, counsel for the New Jersey company, announced that the company had already turned over the technical statements for two years to the Government, and that search is now being made for the remaining ones.

Miss Viola C. Mertens, who was a clerk and stenographer in Gerbracht's office prior to October, 1909, making up technical statements, identified numerous books and packages of papers as the ones she had used in making her reports.

Spitzer will take the witness stand for cross-examination this morning.

SPITZER WROTE CONFESSION.

Held in Jersey Prison and Handed Pardon When Work Was Done.

It became known yesterday that, under the name of "Jim Brown," Oliver Spitzer, the chief witness for the prosecution now in the Government sugar fraud cases, was a prisoner for two days last week in the Essex County Penitentiary, in Caldwell, N. J. It was while there that he made his formal confession to Government officials, thus enabling them to spring a surprise upon the defense in the Heike trial. He was taken away on Thursday to go over his statement after it had been typewritten, but even then Warden Martin, the only one except the Government officials, who knew his identity, said nothing about it, secrecy having been impressed upon him.

Spitzer was taken to the Jersey prison on Tuesday by Chief Flynn of the Secret Service. He spent all day at his statement on Wednesday in the room of the Warden with Government representatives and stenographers, and on Thursday he was taken away, his pardon being handed to him before he left, and an order for his release being handed to the Warden.

JULIA WARD HOWE TESTIFIES.

Appears Before Boston Milk Committee in the Interest of Infants.

BOSTON, May 24.—The venerable Mrs. Julia Ward Howe appeared to-day in the interest of the infant population before the milk investigating committee of the Legislature. Mrs. Howe will be 91 years of age next Friday. She entered the room on the arm of her daughter and was escorted to a seat by Attorney A. D. Hill, who is representing the milk consumers.

Mrs. Howe addressed the committee, saying that there is no substitute whatever for milk as a food for children.

"The object of this investigation," she said, "concern many, especially infants, for it seems to be actually a question of life and death. I desire that the producers shall have a fair price for their milk, and that the trouble will be settled in justice to all."

STEAMER CUT IN TWO IN FOG; 18 DROWNED

Crew of Frank H. Goodyear Carried Under by the Suction as She Sinks.

ONLY FIVE PERSONS SAVED

The James B. Woods Crashes Into the Steel Freighter at Full Speed on Lake Huron—Badly Damaged Herself.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT HURON, Mich., May 24.—Eighteen persons are believed to have been drowned in Lake Huron when the big steel freighter, Frank H. Goodyear of Cleveland, was run down in a heavy fog and sunk twenty-five miles off Pointe Aux Barques by the freighter James B. Wood, also of Cleveland. Only five persons on the Goodyear, one of them a woman, are known to have been saved.

The accident happened on Monday, but it was not learned of until to-day, when the Wood arrived here with the five survivors. She had a six-foot hole punched in her bow, and was listing badly. One of the survivors was Mrs. Emma Bassett. She still is in Port Huron, but the men have gone to the office of Mitchell & Co., owners of the Goodyear, in Cleveland.

The cook had just sounded the second call for breakfast on the Goodyear when the crash came, and many were in the mess room. All rushed on deck, and then the boat began to sink. Some jumped into the water and managed to get out of reach of the boat, which was fast filling.

Suddenly the Goodyear parted in the centre, and with a sound which could be heard above the whistling of the Wood, sank out of sight.

Capt. Gibson of the Wood lowered the lifeboats and ordered the crew to make every effort to save the sailors of the sinking steamer.

Within a short time the yawl was brought alongside the Wood, and Capt. Hemenger, Steward Frank Bassett, Mrs. Emma Bassett, Frank Mollick, and George Grant, were taken aboard, all exhausted by their exertions and the length of time they were in the water.

With his infant child in his arms Steward Bassett had almost reached safety in one of the lifeboats when one of the tumbling hatches snatched the baby from his arms. The little one fell into the lake and was drowned despite the frantic efforts of its father to recover it.

Upon the arrival of the Wood at this port the Captain notified his office of the collision and tied up at the Grand Trunk docks.

Capt. Hemenger of the ill-fated steamer also notified the owners of the Goodyear of the accident, and received orders to take the surviving members of the crew to Cleveland.

Mrs. Bassett of Algonac told the following story:

"I was in the cabin when I heard the whistles of both boats. I reached the deck just as the crash came and I grabbed a life preserver. In my excitement I could only get it over one arm, but I jumped over the rail. When I came up I saw some one clinging to a board a short distance away.

"I went down for the second time, and when I came up I found my son Frank was the man on the board. I called for help, but it seemed as though no one would hear me. Then I secured hold of the sinking vessel and managed to hang to a window sill. I shouted to Frank and asked him where his wife and baby were, but he replied that he feared they had gone down.

"I was on the verge of releasing my hold when I saw a small boat coming toward me. The next that I knew I was aboard the Wood."

The steamer Frank H. Goodyear was owned by the Buffalo and Susquehanna Transportation Company of Buffalo, but was operated by Mitchell & Co. of Cleveland. She was 436 feet over all, and of 3,438 net tonnage. She was built in 1902 at Lorain, Ohio, and carried a crew of 23 men. Capt. F. R. Hemenger of Bellevue, Ohio, was in charge.

The James B. Wood, which is owned by the Gilchrist Transportation Company, is a steel steamer of 5,744 net tonnage and 514 feet long.

The Goodyear was coming down from Lake Superior laden with ore. The Wood was going up light.

The WILD OLIVE

A Remarkable New Novel by the Author of THE INNER SHRINE

THE WILD OLIVE has the same remarkable qualities which made the author's previous novel, The Inner Shrine, the most widely read and talked-of book of its year. As a Serial in Harper's Magazine, THE WILD OLIVE has called forth an unusual number of letters written in terms of almost extravagant praise and delighted interest. The book, which is now ready, contains much new material not possible within the exigencies of serial space.

The title is quoted from St. Paul—"And thou, being a wild olive-tree"—an allusion to the heroine's origin, which places her, a growth of nature, apart from the cultivated trees of the orchard—society.

THE WILD OLIVE is a story in a new setting, a story that seizes the reader from the first chapter—a story of great vigor and delightful charm. The scene opens in the Adirondack wilderness, with a fugitive from justice, young and a gentleman, running through the woods at night. Looking through a cottage window, he recognizes the judge who condemned him—innocent. A girl's form outside beckons him to follow. The story rushes on, carrying the youth into rehabilitated manhood and the girl to the height of emotional sacrifice and final triumph.

WE GET A FOURTH OF CHINESE LOAN

The Hankow—Sze-Chuen Railway Agreement Signed Yesterday in Paris.

EQUALITY AS TO TENDERS

But the English Successfully Insist on Having the Engineering Rights for the Hankow-Canton Sections.

PARIS, May 24.—The Hankow—Sze-Chuen Railway loan agreement was signed to-day. The signers are representatives of financial groups of the United States, France, Great Britain, and Germany. The agreement provides for a loan to the Chinese Government of $30,000,000 for railroad construction.

A formal statement issued by the representatives of the financiers announces that "the basis of the agreement is absolute equality between the four groups," in which the Americans, with the consent of their colleagues, are included.

The statement points out that the agreement assures equality of treatment in the matter of tenders for supplies. This condition is regarded as especial cause for self-congratulation on the part of the Americans, who consider that they emerge from the negotiations splendidly, considering the situation when the negotiations were begun.

Financial equality and equality of treatment in the matter of supplies taken by the purchasing agents are obtained, and in addition the American group obtains a sub-engineer and the construction of 200 kilometers of the I-Chang branch, while it will also have the building of 400 kilometers of the extension to Sze-Chuen if the latter materializes.

Nevertheless, the British group has gained the chief victory in successfully insisting upon having the engineering rights for the Hankow-Canton sections. The Germans retain the engineering rights for the "Hu-Peh loop," except for certain sub-engineering rights, which were ceded to the Americans.

In the matter of materials and facilities for manufacturers to present tenders the four countries will share alike.

Now that the agreement has been concluded, considerable doubt is expressed as to whether the Chinese Government will accept the loan. Last Autumn, when the British group blocked the negotiations, Peking was most anxious that the plan should be put through. Since then, however, much opposition to the employment of foreign capital has developed in Hu-Nan Province, and it is feared that the recent anti-foreign outbreaks there may influence the Government to change its attitude.

The financial negotiations were conducted for the Americans by Henry P. Davison, E. C. Grenfell, Herman Harjes, Jr., and Paul M. Warburg, bankers, and Willard D. Straight, formerly American Consul General at Mukden.

The Hankow—Sze-Chuen loan agreement has been hanging fire for more than a year, during which time it has been the subject of diplomatic negotiations as well as of continuous exchanges between the financial groups interested.

Last June 6 it was announced that China proposed to borrow $27,500,000 from a syndicate of British, French, and German bankers for the construction of a railroad from Hankow to Canton and from Hankow west to I-Chang, and an extension into Sze-Chuen. Under the terms of the agreement each country furnishing the capital for the railway was to have charge of the work of constructing proportionate mileage of the road. This would have distributed the work equally among France, Germany, and Great Britain.

As soon as the American State Department was advised of the proposed loan Secretary Knox, at the direction of the President, indicated to the Chinese Government that American financiers would like to participate. China was agreeable, but the other Governments were not, as the inclusion of the United States would mean a division of the loan into four parts instead of three.

Matters came to a head when President Taft sent a message direct to the Chinese Prince Regent on behalf of the bankers of this country, and received in reply from the Regent an assurance that America's equal share in the loan would be favored by China.

Accordingly a new agreement was arranged by which the loan was increased to $30,000,000 and the United States admitted to a quarter share. The American financiers were also placed on an equal footing with the foreign groups in the matter of supplying material and appointing subordinate engineers.

Since this general understanding was reached negotiations between the groups have continued over minor points in the agreement, which was finally signed yesterday.

DR. MAGNES TO STAY HERE.

Retiring Rabbi of Temple Emanu-El to Work in This City.

The Rev. Dr. Judah Leon Magnes, who is to leave Temple Emanu-El at the expiration of his term in October as a result of the disagreement between him and the congregation in the matter of service and ritual, will continue Jewish work in this city, according to a statement he made at his home, 17 Livingston Place, last night. This course, he said, had been urged upon him by letters of encouragement from Jews here and elsewhere. Just what will be the nature of his work, he said, he could not yet make known.

"I regret that Temple Emanu-El could not undertake at the present time to turn its face toward the sources of Judaism," said Dr. Magnes. "It seems to me only a turning in the direction pointed out, can make Temple Emanu-El the force in Judaism it ought to be by reason of its wealth and the character of its membership. I leave the temple with good will toward it and with the sincere hope that it may become increasingly Jewish as time goes on.

"As to myself, I would say that I have in mind a plan for Jewish work in New York City. The plan is not as yet formulated. I shall make announcement of it in due course. I have received very many encouraging letters from all sections of the Jews here and elsewhere, and also many offers of help should I undertake the work I contemplate."

BOYD ALEXANDER KILLED.

Well-Known English Traveler Murdered by Natives in French Congo.

LONDON, May 24.—Lieut. Boyd Alexander, the well-known traveler, has been murdered by natives near Wadai, in the French Congo.

This bare fact reached the Foreign Office to-day. No details are obtainable as yet.

Lieut. Boyd Alexander, late of the Seventh Battalion, British Rifle Brigade, retired from the army in 1907. He led several notable scientific expeditions. He headed the expedition to the Cape de Verde Islands in 1897; also the expedition to Fernando Po, which resulted in the successful ascent of Mount St. Isabel and the discovery of many new birds in 1904, and in 1904-07 he was the leader of the Alexander-Gosling expedition across Africa from the Niger to the Nile.

He was the author of several volumes descriptive of his travels. He received gold medals from the Royal Geographical Society of Antwerp and the Royal Geographical Society of London, and was an Honorary Fellow of the Royal Scottish Geographical Society. He was born in 1873. His home was Swifts Place, Granbrook.

DENIES FAKE RECORD CHARGE.

Cunard Chairman Points to Inherent Proof of Mauretania Figures.

The Cunard Line gave out yesterday this copy of a letter addressed by its Chairman in Liverpool to the editor of the Atlantic Monthly in reply to the allegation in an article in that magazine that records of transatlantic voyages were frequently "faked":

Cunard Steamship Co., Ltd.,
Liverpool, May 17, 1910.

To the Editor of The Atlantic Monthly.

Dear Sir: In an article entitled "The Man on the Bridge" in your May issue, Mr. Charles Torry Delaney makes a serious accusation against the Cunard Company and against the officers of the steamship Mauretania, when he states that the latest record of that ship, 26.08 knots, was faked.

The correct figures are 26.06 knots, not 26.08, as given in the article, and the passage was made on the short, or northerly, course, in September, 1909, not on the long, or southerly, track, as Mr. Delaney implies.

The observations taken at the time, and the record of courses set, afford conclusive evidence that the steamer actually covered the distance given, (2,784 miles,) quite apart from the word of honorable members of an honorable profession. Yours faithfully,

A. A. BOOTH,
Chairman.

SEEK RECEIVER FOR TELEPHONE COMPANY

Stockholders Allege That the Continental Telephone & Telegraph Is Insolvent.

FORMED TO FIGHT BELL CO.

Applicants Allege That Officers of New Jersey Concern Have Misused Its Assets—Incorporated at $50,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 24.—United States Judge Rellstab signed an order to-day compelling the Continental Telephone and Telegraph Company to show cause here next Tuesday why a receiver should not be named for the concern, on the ground of insolvency. The complainants are Bernard M. Wolf of Boston and Max Koehler of St. Louis, stockholders. Mismanagement of the company's affairs and misuse of assets by some of the officers are alleged in the bill as the cause of the alleged troubles of the company. Pending decision on the application, the officers of the company are restrained from disposing of any asset of the company.

The company was chartered in New Jersey last November for the avowed purpose of consolidating independent telephone lines throughout the country in opposition to the Bell Telephone interests. The authorized capital stock was $50,000,000, and the charter provided for an issuance of $25,000,000 of bonds. As soon as the charter was granted the Continental Company acquired the capital stock of the National Telephone Corporation, worth $10,000,000, this stock being obtained by the Consolidated Company acting as vendor.

There was an undertaking in addition to turn over this stock to pay the Consolidated Company $2,000,000 in cash in return for issuance by the Continental Company of securities.

Koehler and Wolf charge that the Consolidated Company, acting as vendor, was a mere dummy corporation, it being the creature of John A. Howard, President of the Consolidated Company, who through his control of the Consolidated Company dominated the Continental Company. They point out that while the Directors of the Continental Company are scattered over the country, its affairs are controlled absolutely by President Howard and Samuel W. Harper, Treasurer, from the New York office. Another allegation is that without adequate action upon the part of the Directors, Howard made contracts for the acquisition of the telephone properties of Mixer Brothers, Boston; the Rochester Telephone Company, the Independent Telephone Company, the Inter-State Telephone and Telegraph Company, and the American Union Telephone Company.

Explaining the action of the Continental Company as vendor, the complainants say that in order to obtain cash for transacting business Koehler and Howard had the $25,000,000 bonds delivered in part payment for the stock of the National Corporation handed to them as vendors, and these bonds were in turn handed over to a syndicate composed of J. N. Vance, Erskine Hewitt, and Herman C. Stiffel, and this syndicate undertook to underwrite the bonds at 85 per cent. While all of the bonds were underwritten, only $461,745 was collected. This amount is said to be all of the money the Continetal Company ever received, except from loans.

Another charge is that there are outstanding collateral trust notes aggregating more than $900,000, given by the Continental Company in payment for stock. Right to acquire the Rochester Company is declared lapsed, while there is still owing $100,000 to Mixer Brothers, $119,000 for the Independent Union Telephone Company, and $30,000 for the Inter-State Telephone and Telegraph Company stocks. The complainants aver that until all of these obligations are met the Continental Company will not have full control of any of the properties.

The bill goes on to say that syndicate subscribers, who have expressed their unwillingness to pay their pledges because of allegations of fraud and misrepresentation made when the subscriptions were obtained, are the only sources of income now available to the Continental Company.

Another allegation is that Howard and Harper have expended $800,000 in cash in pretending to acquire properties subject to forfeiture, alleged to be worth millions. Howard and Harper are said to be heavy indorsers for the company. The complaint declares that they refuse to make definite statements to the Directors.

EDINBURGH HONORS PEARY.

University Confers LL. D. Degree on Him—Explorer Heartily Welcomed.

EDINBURGH, May 24.—Commander Robert E. Peary received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from the University of Edinburgh to-day.

The ceremony took place before a distinguished company, which gave the American explorer a cordial welcome. In presenting the degree, Sir Ludovic James Grant, Bart., Dean of the Faculty of Law, declared that though the opening decade of the twentieth century had been notable for heroic achievements, nothing had moved the world to greater wonder than Peary's "annexation of the north pole."

In the presence of a large audience tonight the Scottish Geographical Society presented to Commander Peary a silver model of his old arctic ship.

READY TO ENFORCE NEW TAXICAB LAW

The Mayor to Appoint Seven City Inspectors to Look After the Meters.

REDUCTION IN THE RATES

The Companies Say the Last Will Mean a Heavy Loss to Them—Three Tammany Men on the Eligible List.

Mayor Gaynor took up yesterday the matter of appointing Inspectors to oversee the taxicab system of the city, according to the provisions of the ordinance which Mayor McClellan signed last year and which is designed principally to reduce the present taxicab rates. The ordinance created a Chief Inspector and six subordinates.

The selection of these Inspectors was put up to the Municipal Civil Service Commission and examinations were held. On Saturday the commission reported to the Mayor that its examinations had been concluded, and submitted an eligible list containing ninety-seven names, running from 71 to 90 per cent. John Drennan of 74 West Eighty-ninth Street headed the list, and he will be appointed Chief Inspector, it was said at the City Hall yesterday. He has been for some time a Superintendent of one of the big electric cab companies. His six aids, the Mayor said, will be named in order of percentage. Three of the first ten names on the eligible list are those of pupils of the Cherokee Tammany Club civil service school.

The ordinance provides that the new regulations shall go into effect sixty days after the appointment of the Inspectors, so that it will be about Aug. 1 before the public will be able to take advantage of the changed conditions.

The taxicab people are opposed to the new measure, and all of them severely condemned it yesterday. Several pointed out an alleged discrepancy in the ordinance which, they stated, would not cheapen present rates nearly so much as appeared on the surface. This was in regard to the provision that 30 cents for the first half mile shall apply only to two-seated taxicabs. It was pointed out that these kind of taxicabs have passed out of existence, so that the forty-cent rate will have to apply in all instances, as all taxicabs in present use are four-seated.

At least one taxicab firm charges only 40 cents for the first half mile and at the rate of $1.50 an hour for waiting time, which is the charge prescribed by the new rules. The most material change, however, applies to the inspection of meters, and this is made so stringent that the number of cases of overcharging by zealous chauffeurs is expected to be greatly reduced.

The legal maximum rates under the new ordinance will be as follows:

> For each taxicab intended to seat two persons inside, and driven by motive power, for one-half mile or any part thereof, 30 cents; additional quarter mile, or any part thereof, 10 cents; waiting time at the rate of $1 per hour; each taxicab intended to seat four persons inside, and driven by motive power, for one-half mile or any part thereof, 40 cents; each additional quarter mile or part thereof, 10 cents; waiting time at the rate of $1.50 per hour; one piece of baggage, 20 cents.
>
> No charge shall be made for handbags, dress suit cases, of a child under 5 years of age.
>
> All rates of fare shall depend on the number of persons which each vehicle is intended to seat inside and not on the number of passengers actually carried, and no owner or driver of any taxicab shall use or permit to be used any taximeter which shall calculate or indicate a rate of fare which shall depend on the number of persons actually carried, under a penalty of $25 for each offense.

The ordinance also requires that each taxicab shall be equipped with figures of such a size as to be easily legible from the rear seat; that each meter shall be placed in a position approved by an Inspecter, so that it can be read easily by the passenger, and that after sundown the face of the meter shall be illuminated.

All meters must be exhibited to any Inspector on demand, and if any passenger requests an inspection or makes a complaint to the Bureau of Licenses the owner of the vehicle must withdraw it from service until the meter has been inspected and tested. All meters found 5 per cent. defective must be removed. Taximeters are to be inspected and marked at least every six months, and licenses will not be issued to taxicabs unless they have been examined and approved by Inspectors.

The managers of large taxicab companies said yesterday that the new ordinance was unfair, and that it would propably present opportunities for graft.

"I approve of the ordinance in some of its features," said President Richard W. Meade of the New York Transportation Company, "but I think the rates are entirely too small. The appointment of Inspectors ought to be a good thing for the companies who do business on the level. The public are undiscriminating in placing the blame for overcharges, and we who try to do right are blamed along with those who charge exorbitant prices. The thirty-cent rate is too small to be remunerative."

"I am opposed to the ordinance, as I think it is very unjust," said D. J. Holdsworth of the Connecticut Cab Company, which operates yellow cabs. "We are running too cheap now, and far below what the old horse rigs used to cost. The new rates will mean a loss to most companies of from $100 to $200 a day."

"If the right Inspectors are appointed they will not be able to do much damage, but it seems to me that the new ordinance presents excellent opportunities for petty grafting," said J. M. Brennan of the New York Taxicab Company. "The 'bucking element' or the 'pirates,' as we call the roaming taxicab drivers, are the ones that need watching and inspection. The ordinance should not apply to the large legitimate concerns."

OPEN AIR FETE AT COLUMBIA.

President and Mrs. Butler Entertain for Columbia Graduates.

President and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler gave a reception to the graduating class of Columbia University and its friends in the grove—that part of the grounds lying along 120th Street. The university includes Barnard College, Teachers College, the Schools of Law, the Sciences, Philosophy, and Engineering, College of Pharmacy and College of Physicians and Surgeons, and Fine Arts, and there were, it was estimated, between 1,100 and 1,200 students from the graduating classes.

The Barnard girls had a bad scare at first, for by some inadvertence their invitations were not sent, and it looked as if they would only be able to look through the bars of the high fence at the festivities within. But the error was discovered, and they were all present in their prettiest Summer frocks and bonnets.

Under a big red and white marquee placed on the lawn near the drive, and carpeted with Oriental rugs, President and Mrs. Butler received the guests. Mingling with the crowd were Profs. Rudolf Tombo, Jr., George F. Sever, H. B. Mitchell, W. A. Braun, and Supt. of Buildings and Grounds H. L. Norris, forming a general Reception Committee. The Seventh Regiment band, stationed on the Broadway side of the grove, played throughout the afternoon, and at some distance from the other tent was another big blue and white marquee from which was served a cold collation to the guests, who sat around small tables on the lawn.

Among the guests were:

> Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander, Miss Alexander, Col. J. J. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Blashfield, John L. Cadwalader, Mr. and Mrs. William Choate, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews, Prof. and Mrs. Blashford Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, President John Finley of City College and Mrs. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary, Mrs. and Miss Gaynor, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, Mr. and Mrs. Borden Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Ordway Partridge, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pell, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Perkins, Miss Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Taylor Pyne, Mr. and Mrs. T. Oakley Rhinelander, Dean Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Satterlee, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Schieffelin, Mr. and Mrs. Jokichi Takamine, Mrs. Vanderbilt, Craig Wadsworth, and Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren.

Mayor Gaynor hoped to be present, but sent word at the last moment that he would not be able to come.

DENIES CABLE ALLIANCE.

Commercial Company Has Not Joined with Anglo Concern, Mackay Says.

Clarence H. Mackay yesterday made this statement in regard to the report in the London and American papers that the Commercial Cable Company had formed an alliance with its competitor, the Anglo-American Telegraph Company:

> The Commercial Cable Company never has had, and has not now, and does not intend to have any conection whatsoever with its competitor, the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, either in the way of controlling its stock, or making any traffic agreement, or in any other way. The Commercial Cable Company will continue to be independent and competitive, just as the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company will continue to be independent and competitive. All reports to the contrary are false.

BATTLE IS RAGING OUTSIDE BLUEFIELDS

Government Troops Repulsed, but Resume Attack—Venus Lands 500 Men.

WE ARE NOT INTERFERING

Senator Stone Introduces a Resolution Asking for Information as to Whether Our Ships Forbade a Blockade.

BLUEFIELDS, May 24.—Gen. Lara, commanding a force of Government troops, is fiercely attacking the provisional Government's position at the rear of Bluefields.

The Government troops last night began their attack on the position where the provisionals had intrenched themselves, but they were repulsed and returned to the woods. An artillery fire was kept up all night until dawn this morning, when the attack was resumed.

The Government steamer Venus is landing 500 troops off a lagoon twenty-six miles north of Bluefields Bluff for the purpose of attacking the bluff in conjunction with Gen. Lara's force back of Bluefields.

The American gunboats Paducah and Dubuque are not interfering with the movements of the Venus.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—A brief telegram, dated last evening, has been received at the State Department from Consul Moffat at Bluefields, in which he states that Gen. Lara's forces were then attacking the Estrada army intrenched back of the city.

For several weeks a force of Government troops commanded by Gen. Paulino Godey, Inspector General of the Nicaraguan Army, and Gen. Lara has been within a few miles of Bluefields awaiting instructions from headquarters to attack the insurgents. It was believed that the delay in the issue of orders to move upon Bluefields was for the purpose of enabling Gen. Irias, commanding the Government steamer Venus, with troops on board, to reach Bluefields so that a concerted attack from sea and land might be made.

Senator Stone to-day introduced a resolution interrogating the Secretary of State regarding the reported attempt of the Madriz Government to establish a blockade at Bluefields. The department is requested to state whether the naval force of the United States forbade the blockade. If the response should be in the affirmatice Mr. Stone's resolution demands the reason for it, with a citation of authority. It also asks for information as to whether the United States has recognized belligerency in Nicaragua.

OLD GUARD LIMITS THE GRAFT INQUIRY

Senate, 29 to 18, Finally Adopts Assembly Resolution with Its Restrictions on Charges.

BITTER ATTACK BY AGNEW

Tells Senators They Seem to be Accustomed to the Contempt in Which They Are Held.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 24.—After a debate in which some plain language was used about legislative corruption the Senate to-day by a vote of 29 to 18 finally adopted the resolution for a continued inquiry into charges of bribery and other wrongdoing in the form it was returned from the Assembly.

The men who have demanded a full investigation of corruption say it will be impossible under this resolution. They chiefly object to the provision which makes it necessary for charges "verified on knowledge" to be filed before the committee can investigate any legislation. They declare it to be unlikely that any such charges will be filed, and so the committee will really be prevented from following the trails of corruption uncovered recently. Permission for persons under investigation to be represented by counsel who may cross-examine witnesses and interpose objections and dilatory motions is another reason for objection. Besides the committee is to investigate fire insurance and industrial life insurance concerns, and so will be able to pass by bribery matters.

The matter came before the Senate on a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate passed the Assembly resolution last week. Senator Grady was absent from the Senate then. To-day he was on hand, and the by-partisan combination was in fighting array. Senator Grady led his Democratic forces into the battle with great ferocity, and it was by their aid the "Old Guard" element in the Senate won. Here is the vote in detail:

Senator Hinman, in calling up the matter, spoke in a somewhat milder vein than he did last week, when he intimated that the Senators were acting in relation to the proposed investigation like a lot of "weaklings and crooks." He declared, however, that the Assembly resolution would make any real investigation impossible.

"The Assembly Rules Committee," Mr. Hinman asserted, "exercises more arbitrary power than did ever the Rules Committee in the House of Representatives. I maintain that it is high time the methods of the Assembly Rules Committee itself came in for some investigation."

Senator Josiah T. Newcomb did the plainest talking.

"I don't think that we have a properly developed sensitiveness with reference to the strictures from without that are constantly being passed on the legislative branch of our Government," he said. "Perhaps it is that we are getting so used to the contempt in which we are held that we don't mind it any longer.

"There was a terrible commotion here the other day when Senator Hinman declared on the floor that we were acting as weaklings and crooks. And yet, if we were crooks, we could not have acted any differently. Any one not personally familiar with the makeup of this Legislature or the character of the men in it will find in the things we do much to support the belief that we are afraid of a full investigation. There is a gag in every line of the resolution as returned from the Assembly, and I will go further and say that there is an intentional gag."

Senator George H. Cobb, majority leader, declared that it was just such talk as Mr. Newcomb had indulged in which gave rise to objectionable newspaper articles. He characterized the Newcomb statement as hypocritical.

"It should be clear to the members of this Senate that the Assembly amendments have not been made in the interest of precision, but of deception," said Senator Davenport.

Senator Wainwright of Westchester said the Assembly amendments had diverted the prospective investigation from its original purpose.

Senator Grady bitterly assailed those who had attacked the resolution.

"Criticism of this measure can proceed only from ignorance or from a hypocritical, supercritical insincerity," he said.

Assemblyman Lansing's bill prohibiting members of the Legislature from acting as attorneys for any State department was passed by the Assembly to-day by a vote of 86 to 12.

CALL CAUCUS ON PRIMARIES.

Cobb's Compromise Likely to be Made a Party Measure by Republicans.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 24.—At the close of a second conference of the Republican Senators on direct nominations to-night it was announced that a Republican Senate caucus had been called for 12:30 to-morrow afternoon to act on the Cobb compromise bill, which has the sanction of Gov. Hughes, and the Meade-Phillips bill, which embodies the plan of primary reform to which the Republacn machine is willing to subscribe.

As a majority of the Republican Senators favor the Cobb bill, which provides for the direct nomination of Representatives, State Senators, Assemblymen, and county officials, but leaves the State, city, and judiciary nominations to conventions, the decision reached at to-night's conference is regarded as a victory for the Governor's friends. At the conference last night twenty-two of the thirty-four Republican Senators favored the Cobb bill. Should the caucus to-morrow decide on that measure, as indicated, the action will be binding on the majority in the Senate, and this would insure the passage of the bill.

It was said after the conference to-night that there was little fear that the opponents of the Cobb bill would refuse to attend the caucus. These men have received their training in the machine school of politics, and place much emphasis on their regularity.

The Governor remained at the capitol all evening and kept in touch with the situation. Should the caucus determine to bind the Republican Senate majority for the Cobb bill it is likely that measure wil be introduced and passed in the Senate to-morrow afternoon under an emergency message from the Governor. It woud then go to the Assembly and would, in the regular procedure, be sent to the Committee on Rules.

From talks with Speaker Wadsworth and other Republican leaders in the Assembly it would appear that the Cobb bill has no chance whatever of passing that branch of the Legisature. Behind the practical certainty that it will receive scant consideration there looms large the possibility of an extra session.

Senator Hinman of Broome to-day was defeated in an attempt to take from the table his motion to reconsider the vote by which his bill, embodying the Governor's original direct nominations plan, was beaten in the Senate a week ago. The vote stood 21 to 18.

At a conference of the Democratic Senators to-day it was decided that the minority should vote as a unti against the Cobb compromise bill. This means that sixteen Democratic votes, including those of Senators Gardner and Ramsperger, who voted for the Hinman-Green bill, will be cast against it.

VICTORY FOR COMMUTERS.

Assembly Votes for Regulation of Fares on Suburban Trains.

ALBANY, May 24.—The Senate rushed through the greater part of its calendar in the closing quarter of an hour this evening, laying aside bills against which there was objection. One of the measures passed was Assemblyman Green's White Rats bill, limiting the fee which booking agents may charge for securing employment for actors to 5 per cent. of the actor's salary.

The Senate also passed the Frawley bill amending the Rapid Transit act by allowing the construction of a third track on elevated roads.

In the Assembly the Senate amendments to the Public Service Commission bill making the law more effective were concurred in by a vote of 100 to 8. The bill now will go to the Governor. One of the amendments by the Senate was for the supervision of commutation and mileage rates.

Tammany secured a victory to-day when the Ward bill, amending the election law as to watchers and the identification of voters in New York City, was defeated by the Assembly. The bill lacked three votes necessary to pass.

The Assembly also defeated the Conklin bill providing for the limitation of the number of saloons in New York City to one for every 750 of population.

MODISTE A SUICIDE.

Despondent Over Business Failure, Carrie N. Hyatt Shoots Herself.

Despondent because her business establishment had been a failure, Carrie N. Hyatt, a dressmaker, committed suicide by shooting herself in the breast with a heavy revolver in her apartment in the studio building at 75 West Forty-fourth Street late yesterday afternoon. She had a dress-making establishment at the Forty-fourth Street address for several years. Her trade flourished until about two months ago when she met with reverses. These brought on a period of despondency and for several weeks, according to Mary Brady, caretaker at the address, Miss Hyatt would lock herself in her apartment and weep for hours at a time.

Miss Hyatt left her home at 1 o'clock yesterday and returned about 4. On her return she was met by the caretaker in the hallway. The latter continued on her way downstairs, and as she reached the street door she heard two shots. She ran back to Miss Hyatt's apartment, but on trying the door found it locked. She then telephoned to Dr. J. M. de Bermingham at 106 West Forty-fifth Street. When the doctor arrived he, with the assistance of several men, broke open the door of the studio and found Miss Hyatt stretched on the bed with the revolver by her side. Two shells had been exploded.

No note was left by the suicide, nor was there any means of finding where relatives could be reached.

CONTROL WIRE COMPANIES.

Senate Passes Bill for State Supervision of Telegraph and Telephones.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 24.—With only eight adverse votes—seven of them by Democrats who follow the leadership of Minority Leader Thomas F. Grady—the Senate to-day passed the Merritt bill placing telegraph and telephone companies in this State under the supervision of the Public Service Commission for the Second District. The bill has been passed by the Assembly, and now will go to Gov. Hughes for his approval.

There was very little debate on the bill, consideration of which has been put off from day to day out of deference to Mr. Grady, who attacked the measure when it came up for passage on the ground that it was undemocratic, that it took from the Legislature powers and prerogatives that rightly belonged to it, and that the Public Service Commission already had its hands full.

Senator George Allen Davis of Erie, who introduced the bill in the Upper House, replied that the opposition of Senator Grady was good reason why the bill should pass.

Only one Republican—Senator Charles Alt of Brooklyn, Kings—voted against the bill. These Democrats voted in opposition:

Cronin, Cullen, and Harden, Kings; Frawley, Grady, McManus, and C. D. Sullivan.

These Democrats broke away from Grady's leadership:

Bayne, Richmond; Caffrey, Schulz, and Wagner, New York; Gardner, Montgomery, and Ramsperger, Erie.

The bill was prepared under the auspices of the special legislative committee which was appointed at the last session to investigate the subject and recommend legislation.

Power is given to the commission, upon complaint or upon its own motion, to issue orders in relation to rates and service. This authority, the bill stipulates, shall not be construed as giving the commission power to make an order requiring a telegraph or telephone company to perform any act which is unjust or unreasonable or in violation of the requirements of its franchise or of any State or Federal law.

The commission receives the power of investigation and limited control over the forms of accounts and records of the companies, which are required to file annual reports with the commission. The commission is given the veto power over the exercise by the companies of rights and privileges under the franchises, which they have not exercised up to this time.

The measure contains provisions against discriminations in rates. It prohibits any corporation or association other than a telephone or telegraph company, to acquire more than 10 per cent. of the stock of any telephone or telegraph company.

The bill prohibits the granting of reduced rates or free passes or franks for transmission of any messages except by officers of or employes of the companies.

The bill requires that the permission and approval of the commission shall be given for issues of stocks and bonds, except that companies may issue notes payable otherwise than on demand for proper corporate purposes without the approval of the commission, and notes to be payable at specified periods of not more than twelve months.

These short-time notes must not be refunded or paid by any issue of stocks or bonds or evidence of indebtedness running for more than twelve months from the date of issuance of the notes.

THE SUFFRAGE CAUSE INVADES MEN'S CLUB

Warm Debate at Quaint Club's Feast Over the Merits of Mary Wollstonecraft.

SOME THOUGHT HER FLIGHTY

One Speaker Declares the Early Advocate of Women's Rights Was a Home-Wrecker.

Many words were spoken on the subject of woman suffrage last night at the National Arts Club, 119 East Nineteenth Street, where the "Quaint" Club and the "Twilight" Club entertained at dinner the Men's League for Woman Suffrage. The battle raged mostly about Mary Wollstonecraft, an early advocate of woman's rights, in whose memory a statue is about to be erected.

John F. Tucker, President of the Quaint Club, said that his organization had thought of entertaining the Men's League for Woman Suffrage to keep up with its fixed plan of doing the quaintest thing. He introduced John E. Millholland as toastmaster in the rôle of father of a most militant suffragist. He accepted, but registered his dsapproval of being forever introduced merely as the father of Miss Ines Milholland.

Alexander Harvey, editor of Current Literature, first brought into the discussion Mary Wollstonecraft, telling something about her. She was born in England in 1759, and died in 1797, he said. She and her sisters were forced from home by their father, and she began earning her living teaching school. In 1792 she wrote "Vindication of the Rights of Women," and the same year formed a living alliance, not a marriage, with Gilbert Imlay, an American merchant in Paris.

Mr. Harvey said he had read the so-called love letters of Mary Wollstonecraft, and that they were nauseous things. He had heard, he went on, that a statue was to be erected in her memory. He suggested that it be written on her statue that she broke up her sister's household, robbed another woman of her husband, drove one child into the grave and another into immorality, giving as her excuse that she was fighting the battle for women's rights.

The audience of about 100 had more suffragists in it than antis, and Mr. Harvey did not get a great deal of applause.

Besides putting himself on record as being in favor of a squad of 500 policewomen of the Salvation Army in this city, Prof. Fagnani of the Union Theological Seminary said this country was not now democratic. "There is too strong a tory sentiment running here to entitle us to call ourselves democratic," he went on. "There are entirely too many who speak disparagingly of the masses, of the jury system, showing themselves in favor, more and more, of restricted government."

After stating that the justice of woman suffrage in this country is indisputable to rational and intelligent people, he declared that the predominating influence in all the Churches now is against it. He quoted Cardinal Gibbons as saying that it would be a "deathblow to domestic happiness." "What does he know about domestic happiness?" asked Prof. Fagnani.

He ridiculed the chemist's argument against the female franchise. "Since government is only a matter of economics," he said, "and since economics is only a Greek word for housekeeping, who ought to be better able to attend to government that woman?"

Dr. Charles A. Doremus, while not mentioning the katabolic theory by name, defended it, saying that nature intended that men and women should go along about as they are now going, so far as the division of work and rights was concerned.

Henry Frank, the lecturer, defended the things women want to do, defended Mary Wollstonecraft as one who, like Christ and other martyrs, had been crucified by the race for a great cause. He thought that anything out of the way she did should be charged against the race and not against her.

James F. Morton, the official poet of the Quaint Club, then apologized for the official poem in honor of the occasion which he was about to read. He said that his muse was not in good working order, but that he had done his best, mentioning, by the way, that Mary Wollstonecraft was one of those geniuses who may be pardoned if they stray out of the beaten paths.

The poem was about the battle line and the stalwart fighters for the cause.

Mrs. Kirby Spencer, referring to Mary Wollstonecraft, said that it would not do to probe the private lives of the great men of genius, either. She had the last word.

SUSTAINED MADDEN DEMURRER

But Justice Ford Did Not Decide the Horseman's Suit Against L. V. Bell.

John E. Madden did not obtain a judgment by default in his suit against Louis V. Bell for alleged abuse of the process of the courts as THE TIMES was led to believe yesterday. Supreme Court Justice Ford signed an interlocutory judgment awarding costs, which sustained Mr. Madden's demurrer to the fourth of Mr. Bell's separate defenses, the first three of which were withdrawn. Of this defense Justice Ford said that "it is insufficient in law on the face thereof," and "sets up no facts that may not be proved under a general denial if material." The fourth separate defense alleged that Madden had been fined for contempt of court in proceedings brought by Mrs. Bell, of which he complained.

Justice Ford gave Mr. Bell twenty days to amend his answer to Mr. Madden's suit. Mr. Madden has abandoned all previous actions against Mr. Bell, so Edward J. McCrossin, attorney for Mr. Bell, said yesterday, including that one for the alienation of the affections of Mrs. Bell, formerly Mrs. Madden.

TWELVE MORE CITY AUTOS.

Money Voted for Them and an Investigation of Purchases Called For.

The Aldermen deferred action for a week, after a long debate yesterday, on the proposal to establish a municipal bathing house at Coney Island.

After money had been voted for the purchase of twelve additional city automobiles—one for the Commissioner of Parks of the Bronx, four for Borough President Steers of Brooklyn, and seven for the Water Department—Alderman Alderman Folks introduced a resolution, which was referred, calling for the appointment of a committee to investigate the entire question of the purchase of automobiles for the use of city officials. The resolution said that the city now owns over 150 automobiles, which cost more than $340,000, and that the chauffeurs employed to run them cost the city more than $100,000 a year, with $125,000 a year additional for repairs and maintenance.

Water Commissioner Thompson received permission to install 225 additional high-pressure hydrants in the city and to purchase a motor boat to take the place of Col. Padden's yacht Antietam.

"DEAD-LINE" MAN CONVICTED.

One of the Car Barn Gang Found Guilty of Assaulting a Policeman.

Louis Gross, first of the "cars barn gang" to be put on trial, was found guilty of assault in the second degree yesterday before Judge Crain in General Sessions.

On May 1 three policemen ventured past the "dead line" at Ninety-seventh Street and Second Avenue, marked by the following sign:

"No cops allowed on this block."

They were badly beaten, but six men were finally arrested.

The remaining five are to be tried to-day by Assistant District Attorney Ellison. Gross hit Policeman Gorman across the forehead with a car coupler.

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S absorbing novel
"A Modern Chronicle"

HONORA

The distinguishing mark of the Twentieth Century is said to be "the discovery of woman"; the critics have discovered several kinds of women in HONORA, the heroine of Mr. Churchill's new novel—

"HONORA is an extremely attractive young person. . . . That Mr. Churchill keeps her wholly lovable shows the gentleness and the art of his handling." —New York Sun

"HONORA is one of the most vital women in modern fiction." —Plain Dealer

"HONORA has rare beauty of soul and body." —Boston Herald

"HONORA is a terrific, highly destructive social engine, claiming womanhood's privileges and shirking burdens." —Chicago Tribune

"HONORA is a piquant ice chest." —Mirror

"HONORA is clever, complex . . . strongly suggestive of Thackeray's Becky Sharp."

Illustrated. BUT THEY ALL AGREE THAT THE NOVEL IS "PROFOUNDLY INTERESTING," "MUCH MORE THAN MERELY INTERESTING," "EMOTIONALLY STRONG," "UNDOUBTEDLY POWERFUL." Cloth, $1.50.

WILL GIVE OPERA WITH SHOP WORKERS

Young Men and Women from Department Stores Tried Out for a Municipal Company.

PLAN BACKED BY BONCI

Fine Voices Among Applicants—The Scenery Promised by Sothern, and Managers Will Lend a Theatre.

What is called a Municipal Opera Company is being organized in this city. Its organizers hope to make it resemble the municipal opera companies of Paris, Berlin, and other European cities.

The solo singers are to be fifty young men and women who are employed in the city's department stores. The chorus will consist of 100 other young department store employes, who earn from $6 to $15 a week and who consequently can't pay music teachers to train their voices. The organizer of the company is Albert Mildenberg, a music teacher, with a studio on the thirteenth floor of Carnegie Hall. He is musical director of the Miss Ely's School.

The company will offer "La Bohème," "Pagliacci," and "Michael Angelo" in the first two weeks of next January, according to present plans. It will then go "on the road" for several weeks. It will return to this city and sing for two weeks more next April. Signor Bonci, the Metropolitan Opera House tenor, who is one of the movement's backers, has promised to sing at one performance. E. H. Sothern has promised to loan his "Romeo and Juliet" scenery for the production of "Michael Angelo," and scenery for the other operas can be rented for $300 a night, according to Mr. Mildenberg. He says he has friends among the theatre proprietors who will lend him a theatre.

Thirty-nine candidates attended the trial in Mr. Mildenberg's studio last week, and twenty-eight more yesterday. The voices of those who attended yesterday's test furnished many surprises. All were anxious to join the company, and many had stories of self-denial to tell in connection with their efforts to learn to sing.

One girl, for example, earns $6 a week in the credit department of a store in Sixth Avenue. She came to the studio—as, indeed, all the girl aspirants did—in her very best frock. She had brought with her an old English ballad called "My Dear True Love."

"My, my, how crumpled it is," said Mr. Mildenberg, as he sat down to the piano to play the accompaniment.

"It's my favorite," said the girl, shyly. Then she began to sing in a mezzo-soprano voice, so true and sweet as to win all her hearers. A German girl, whose hat brim was almost as broad as she herself was tall, brought a sentimental refrain called "Any Old Port in a Storm," to have her voice tried out on. She helps her father keep his shop. When she began to sing, her voice turned out to be as deep as a boy's tenor. She sang with sincerity, which was characteristic of many of the other girls.

A poorly dressed girl said she was going to sing the aria from "Trovatore." Something in her enunciation of the Italian words arrested Mr. Mildenberg's attention.

"Where did you learn to sing Italian music? Have you ever taken lessons from a teacher?" Mr. Mildenberg asked.

"I couldn't afford a teacher. I learned from a phonograph we have at home," the girl said.

Another voice, trained by phonograph, belonged to a young man who had what Mr. Mildenberg called a "great, big, ripping baritone." So anxious was this boy to study music that he hired a phonograph out of his earnings. He does not know the meaning of one of the Italian words he sings, but pronounces them correctly from catching them accurately as they come from the machine.

"Just to get a few lessons I have denied myself even the necessities," said one young woman who wore a gingham dress. Her lessons cost her $4 a week—just half what she earned.

"Out of the sixty-seven I've heard so far I've found fifty really good ones, and there are only three which I have definitely decided not to accept," said Mr. Mildenberg after the trial yesterday. "All these young men and women stand behind the counter all day long. But they are intelligent and are going to have a chance to learn to sing. I mean to devote as much of my time to training them as I can outside my duties at Miss Ely's School and my private lessons. Bonci, the Metropolitan tenor, has helped me in the work of reorganization. It is, indeed, partly his plan. I am going to Italy in a few weeks to get the rights of 'La Bohème.' I will begin regular rehearsals in August when I return."

STILL NEEDED, A RETRACTION.

During the campaign of 1908, from its very outset, Mr. Taft made statements in support of his election not only without foundation in fact, but flatly contradicted by known facts, in regard to the tariff law of 1894 and its effect upon the prosperity of the country. His attention was called to these in the public press without eliciting any response. He has now gathered his speeches of this period into a handsomely printed volume and issued them for such wide circulation as his eminence in public affairs will insure. That will be large undoubtedly in his own country. Apparently it is expected to extend to the Old World, as the right of translation into foreign languages is reserved. In these circumstances we regret that Mr. Taft has not seen fit to correct his errors of fact or to withdraw unjust comments thereon based. On the contrary, after this long period for reflection, he repeats them.

In his address on "The Present Issues of the Two Great Parties," "delivered at Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 21, 1908," Mr. Taft said:

> The last Democratic Administration entered upon its labors in March, 1893, and gave up power, under the mandate of the people, in March, 1897. During this period it repealed the McKinley Tariff bill, passed in 1890, and enacted the Gorman-Wilson Tariff bill of 1893. With the prospect of a Democratic tariff for revenue, and under the operation of the Gorman-Wilson Tariff bill subsequently passed, a period of industrial depression set in, which continued through the next Presidential campaign of 1896.

The first essential error here is in dates. The Wilson tariff law was not enacted in 1893, but in 1894, and went into operation Aug. 27 of that year. This change of a year serves to sustain the impression Mr. Taft sought to produce. We do not charge that it was deliberately made with intent to deceive; but if it was due, and its repetition is now due, to ignorance, the alternative is unpleasant. In the next place the "period of industrial depression" set in long before the passage of the Tariff bill, and passed its most acute stage before that bill had been introduced. The Clearing House Association of New York issued its first certificates—the sure, infallible, and inevitable sign of general disturbance—on June 21, 1893; their last Sept. 6, and completed the retirement of them on Nov. 1. These serious events did not take place "under the operation of the Gorman-Wilson Tariff bill." Nor was the apprehension of tariff reform by the favorites of the protective tariff the chief, or even an important, element in bringing them about. The crisis of credit, the paralysis of enterprise, the spread of anxiety and fear—in a word, the panic—were due to many and complex causes. The main cause was unquestionably the silver legislation which Mr. Taft's party enacted and of which the bravest and noblest of his predecessors in the Presidency since Lincoln urged and obtained the repeal. Of this cardinal cause Mr. Taft took no note in 1908. He harped again and again on the "Gorman-Wilson Tariff bill," "which had laid waste the industries of this country and had stopped the fires and the wheels of trade and had thrown out of employment a greater percentage of the wage earners than ever before in the history of the world."

Again let us look at the dates. On the 1st of November, 1893—the very day the last of the Clearing House certificates were redeemed—Congress repealed the provision of the Act of July 14, 1890, requiring the purchase of 52,000,000 ounces of silver bullion yearly. It was the operation of the law then repealed, coupled with the lavish expenditure that had emptied the Treasury, which brought business disturbance to a head. The law of 1890 was piling up silver, inflating the paper currency with legal tender certificates issued for silver, and draining gold from the country. When Mr. Cleveland took office in 1893 he found the cash reserve only $24,000,000, which he had left in 1889 at $70,000,000, and the gold reserve barely $100,000,000, which he had left at $197,000,000, a net loss of over $143,000,000 in four years. In the last seven months of 1892 more gold had been drawn from the Treasury than in thirteen years previously. During the operation of the Purchase act the Treasury had accumulated $147,000,000 of depreciated silver and lost $132,000,000 of gold, while the paper currency was proportionately swollen. The suspension of any pretense of gold payments, repudiation, and the abandonment of the gold standard were but a question of time, and a very short time, if this process were to go on. The certainty of this and the obstacles Mr. Cleveland encountered in trying to get the Sherman law of 1890 wiped off the statute books were the dominant causes of the panic of 1893 and the depression that followed it.

Mr. Taft has chosen to represent a very moderate tariff reduction made a year after the panic began as the chief cause; to ignore the disastrous effect of the silver legislation of his own party, and also to ignore the heroic courage and firmness of President Cleveland in rescuing the country from that disaster and saving it from a still worse fate. In this gross error and grosser injustice he not only persists, but seeks by formal publication to perpetuate them.

THE STEINWAY TUNNEL BILL.

What the headlines call the Steinway tunnel "grab" has passed the Senate, 31 to 9. Hard words break no bones, and if the Assembly will pass the bill the headlines may say what they will for all the tunnel people will care. And, whatever the headlines say, the fact will remain that the bill, designed to legalize a franchise which was lost for no fault, and through the city's obstruction in part, was drafted in accordance with the court's suggestion of what the situation requires, and after consultation with the Public Service Commission. No new franchise is given—that must be bargained for. The bill merely provides for the transfer of title of the tunnel from the Trustees who hold but cannot operate it to any corporation which may hereafter become capable of operating it upon acquiring the title.

This is only part of the plot. At one of the hearings on the question Mayor Gaynor stated confidentially in public session that it was his desire and intention to put the tunnel to work. His words as reported, and never contradicted, were, "The Steinway tunnel will be opened within a short time, and extended to Times Square." Now comes the confirmation in the passage of the bill, which will even enable the extension of the tunnel to Tenth Avenue, or perhaps even to Weehawken Ferry. No wonder Senator Newcomb protested that this "fails to conform to any of the conditions that modern policy and practice deem desirable in such cases." We do not ourselves recall any other such case, this being unique, so far as we know. But that is a mere detail, and does not conflict with the essential soundness of the Senator's position. Modern practice requires that all future subways in New York shall be built with the mouth alone, and that they shall be devoted, not to the carriage of passengers, but to the disciplining of haughty corporations which have sunk millions in carrying passengers more swiftly and conveniently and further than their contract requires.

The existence of the unused tunnel served well for raising tax valuations, and now for some years the fortunate owners of real estate which might be advantaged by the operation of the tunnel have enjoyed the inestimable blessing of paying taxes "tunnel on," as the wicked say in Wall Street. This did not enrich the owners, who could not sell their property on the same basis, but it raised them to the same meek and chastened frame of mind as that so familiarly exemplified by Mr. Shonts and Mr. Hedley. They are the heavenly twins, and made such by the process known as taking the lean with the fat.

Everybody, of course, is in favor of what Senator Newcomb called "modern practice." After we have had enough of the practice, then we shall have more subways. Only nine Senators voted for more practice. Thirty-one voted for more subways. We are shocked. If the same proportions should prevail in the Assembly the tunnel might be operated. That would spoil the headlines, and violate all precedents under modern practice. That would be a sad blow to those who prefer reform to rapid transit.

HAUSMANNIZING NEW YORK.

After taking thought about the matter we presume the people and the constituted authorities of New York will conclude that it is not worth while to act upon the Mayor's suggestion that a new avenue be laid out, running from Fourteenth to Fifty-ninth Street, midway between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. It is to be observed at the very outset that this is not a $35,000,000 improvement, its cost would be very much nearer $100,000,000. To begin with, the land to be taken for an avenue 100 feet wide contains some 360 city lots, 25 by 100, with their improvements. These lots are worth, at the lowest estimate, on an average, $100,000 each. Assuming that they are assessed at 80 per cent. of that value, they now stand upon the tax books at nearly $30,000,000.

As a first step the lots would be condemned, the buildings would have to be destroyed, and an assessed valuation for taxation amounting to $30,000,000 would have to be wiped off the tax books. But the owners of the property would have to be paid. Their bill, at $100,000 a lot, would amount to $36,000,000. This gives $66,000,000 as the initial outlay, and, adding the expense of laying out the street, it is evident that the total cost to the city, including compensation to owners and loss of assessed valuations, would [illegible] than $75,000,000. The Mayor [illegible] opinion that the city would be reimbursed by assessments levied upon the property benefited, and, of course, by increased taxable valuations. Upon each side of the new avenue there would be rather more than 1,200 city lots, about 2,500 in all. If the assessed valuation of each of these lots were increased by $30,000 the city would be just about "made good" for the cost of the improvement.

But this is not the whole story. The new avenue would be purely a business thoroughfare. Two or three hundred millions of private capital would be expended in the erection of stores, offices, banks, places of amusement, hotels, and other business edifices. Evidently there would be no doubt about the city getting its money back. Its realty valuation would be greatly increased by the improvement, although Fifth and Sixth Avenues would naturally suffer some diminution in realty values through the coming into being of so formidable a rival. In the side streets that would be crossed by the new avenue are many private dwellings. These are among the best residential blocks below the Park. A not inconsiderable population would be compelled to find new homes. Bryant Park, just back of the new Library, would be traversed by the avenue, and that would be too bad. In the very heart of the city for five or ten years there would be no end of confusion, noise, and dirt, due to laying out the street and the erection of the new buildings. There could be no such great gain without some loss and inconvenience.

The purpose of the improvement is to relieve the traffic congestion upon Fifth and Sixth Avenues. There are alternative methods of obtaining that object. A subway might be constructed under Sixth Avenue and the elevated railroad structure overhead might be removed for less money than the new avenue would cost. That would immediately relieve the congestion of Fifth Avenue. If Sixth Avenue were cleared of obstructing columns, the two avenues together could well accommodate the traffic for years to come. Moreover, Seventh Avenue is one of the new subway routes. When that subway is built, and the Pennsylvania terminal completed, there will be a great business growth in that thoroughfare, affording further relief to Fifth and Sixth Avenues. When these facts are taken into account it may not seem to the people of the city that the laying out of the avenue suggested by the Mayor is a matter of prime urgency.

If it were to be a through avenue extending to Harlem, the argument for its construction would be more convincing. But Central Park bars any northward extension. If an avenue were opened along the line proposed we should probably hear very soon of a movement to extend it right through the heart of the Park. Central Park would be a good deal safer from such an invasion if the project is not carried out. It is a good many years since New York discovered the original mistake of laying out the avenues in a north-and-south direction, and the intersecting streets 200 feet apart east and west. That mistake is, unfortunately, irretrievable. It cannot now be corrected by any Hausmannizing process that would be worth its cost.

COLLEGE SPELLING.

Prof. G. M. Whipple of Cornell University has adopted an ingenious and impressive means of setting forth the errors in spelling he has come across in the papers of college students. In fifty-eight of these he discovered 160 mistakes, each of which was made several times by the same student or once by several students. They occurred after the papers had been returned to the students for revision with a special demand for correction of orthography, and in no case have errors been included that were of a certainty mere slips of the pen. The form of presentation of these errors chosen by the professor is a letter from a student to a relative, in which the errors are embodied. Of course, it is understood that no student would make all of them, but on the other hand no student of those examined would be exempt from making some of them. The nature of the students' incapacity and defective training is therefore shown as fairly as it is strikingly. We append a short passage:

> Dear Aunt—Today I recieved my diploma, and now, thank fortun, I am educated. I have not yet intirely determined my carere. Wheather I shall finaly earn my livlihood by going into the solliciting buisness as my uncle's pardoner will dipind on his perferences. At any rate, laborous and humuliating manuel pursuits are furtherest from my intentions, as I am concious allready that the university invironment has prooved particularly valuable to me in evry way. My intellegual equippement has been advansed harmonously; by immetation of the best sholars my vocabular has been strenghthened; superstitions allmost as bad as those of the heathern have been analised and prooved incorect to me; my inaetiative has been arroused and intencified; socialy I am well acquiped and incidently the rough eges I used to show have been eleminated; again, the discipline I have recieved from the pratice work in the labratories of physics and chemistery, where persistance, courtsy, courageousness and similar qualities are definately emphazed, and the knowledge I have recived from the lecturs and disscussions of my proffessors in bonay, rhitoric, mathmatics, phisiology, ect. shoud be a sourse of inestimatible benifit to me from whatever angel it is regarded.

Is it not absurd that the processes of schooling which are supposed to fit a student to enter and even to pass through college should permit in a considerable number of cases such ridiculous and disgraceful defects as are here [illegible]? In one sense the fault lies with the elementary schools undoubtedly. In another it lies with the colleges which fail to demand adequate attainment in the simple and indispensable requirements for admission to the higher grades of instruction. If the demand of the colleges were definite, strict, and firmly enforced, the elementary schools would comply with it. At the same time if the elementary schools were conducted with a true and just conception of what their pupils are entitled to in the way of essential training the colleges could be saved from further attention to the matter.

We shall be told that it is impracticable to teach some persons to spell correctly who are otherwise quite equal to taking advantage of higher education. That is a dubious proposition and is based generally on the well-known fact that some able and even cultivated men do not spell correctly. It will not do to infer from this fact that they could not have been trained successfully in spelling had they had competent instructors. If there are a certain number of congenitally incapable persons of this sort it must be a very small number and can safely be ignored in framing a system of instruction for universal use. Moreover, we have the experience of other countries to show that other and more thorough methods than our own reduce the incompetent spellers to a proportion far less than in our own. Probably the real difficulty lies with a popular notion that severe training in a matter of this sort, which is not in itself very interesting and is never showy, is a contravention of the liberty of the pupil and needlessly tedious or even humiliating. It is a false notion, and the sooner it is got rid of the better for the sane and sound mental condition of the youth of this generation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Antagonism to the Wrights. That there is a growing irritation against the Wright brothers because of what is considered their unjustifiable attempts to restrict the activities of other aviators can be seen by anybody who is interested in the subject of mechanical flight. That the irritation is warranted, that the Wrights are really doing anything more than defend their patents, just as all inventors do, or try to do—that is not so clear, and not every discussion of their policy reveals an accurate knowledge of what they claim.

The brothers have, in fact, asserted, and now maintain, only the legal right to build and use flying machines in which the warping of the "wings" and the motions of the vertical rudder are combined to produce equilibrium. Others thought of doing this as soon as they did, or sooner, but beyond any question they first made practical and successful application of the idea, and there is no obvious reason why anybody else who wants to use it should not pay them for the privilege of doing so. The man who can fly without the aid of this combined action of aileron and rudder is perfectly free to do so, in the United States or elsewhere, and it can hardly be doubted that sooner or later other means of keeping aeroplanes right side up will be discovered. Not a few inventors say that they have already done this, but they seem to be much readier to denounce the Wrights for playing the rôle of the dog in the manger than they are to prove to the satisfaction of the courts that they can fly without infringing the Wright patents.

Those patents, of course, are extremely troublesome to all would-be aviators, but it is an exaggeration to declare them a monopoly, unless it be true, and it probably is not, that they are absolutely essential to the construction of a practicable flying machine. If, as the rival aviators nearly all say, it is possible to do without the combined movement of wing and rudder, the one correcting the partial inefficiency of the other, then the Wrights have pre-empted only a single line of progress and competition is invited rather than repressed. It will hardly be denied that the Wrights can properly be manufacturers and business men, instead of risking their lives in sensational flights, if they choose to do so. They have not lacked the courage required for taking chances on what they deemed fitting occasion, and the fact that many of their feats have been surpassed indicates nothing as to their ability.

Why Rates Were Advanced. Our indisposition to accept President Mellen's view of commuters as burdensome and unprofitable to the roads that carry them is shared by The Wall Street Journal, a paper that is supposed to know a thing or two about railway management and finance. Admitting that there is more money in the transportation of freight than of passengers, it emphasizes the fact that the two go together, and that the commuter does his part toward filling the box cars.

The Wall Street Journal suggests, too, that perhaps President Mellen had for advancing rates a reason which he did not mention. He may have in mind the handling of his commuters a few years hence, not over the New York Central tracks, but by means of a new connecting road into the Pennsylvania Station at Thirty-fourth Street. "It would obviously be good policy," according to this authority, "to start now in getting the commuters accustomed to paying such rates as would make it worth while to transfer to the new extension, gratefully accepting a small reduction as an inducement to do so."

That hath a rather plausible sound. Certainly it is more plausible than is the contention that for many years the New Haven road has been steadily losing enormous sums on its commutation traffic and that it promptly bought up a rival line, threatening to take some of that traffic away, for fear its losses would be decreased.

Hospitals Are Better Than Jails. We do not understand, as Mayor Gaynor apparently does, that the primary purpose of the bill empowering the city to treat inebriates as needing care rather than punishment is to decrease the consumption of intoxicating liquors.

The Mayor explained the reluctance with which he approved of the bill by saying that he thought people had for some years past been becoming steadily more and more temperate in their use of alcohol, and that therefore he could not quite see the necessity of involving the city in the large expenditures which the adoption of the new policy would require, since the improvement in habits would presumably go on without it. His observations are justified and his presumption safe.

By some as yet unsolved mystery [illegible]creasing their per capita production, but there simply must be something wrong with these figures, for it is within everybody's knowledge that excessive drinking is no longer anything like as common as it was twenty, or even ten, years ago, and that, whatever may be the effect of the prohibition laws recently adopted in many States, there is no question at all about that of the new appreciation of the incompatibility of intemperance with commercial and industrial efficiency. Whole classes of men, and very large classes, at that, have been compelled to become total abstainers, or a close approximation thereto, as the only condition on which they can secure or retain employment, and others in numbers even greater have taken the same step voluntarily from realization of the fact that not to do so would result in their lagging hopelessly behind in the stern competitions of modern life.

But the problem of the inebriate remains. To ignore him is impossible and to treat him as a criminal or misdemeanant is absurd. Sending him to jail does no good, since it weakens rather than strengthens his already inadequate power of resistance, while modern medicine, intelligently applied, can often cure the nervous or other malady of which he is the helpless victim. It is the frequency of these cures that warrant the expenditure of city money on him—that make it an economy and not a sentimental extravagance.

NIGHT MESSENGER BOYS.

Child Labor Committee Praises the Bill Signed Saturday.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Many of your readers will doubtless be interested to learn that Gov. Hughes on Saturday signed the Murray Night Messenger Boy bill, which was recently passed by the Legislature.

This measure was introduced at the request of the New York Child Labor Committee to remedy the very serious situation revealed by an investigation conducted by the National Child Labor Committee of the conditions surrounding young messenger boys working at night in our large cities. It was found through this investigation that night work for these boys in a large majority of instances was an introduction for them to immorality and vice.

While this new law will not put an end to social evils in our cities, it will, it is confidently expected, do much toward taking out of these surroundings growing boys, who particularly need to be protected from temptations of this sort. By prohibiting the employment of all boys under 21 years of age after 10 o'clock in the evening and before 5 o'clock in the morning, the chance of messenger boys being called to objectionable places is greatly reduced, if not entirely eliminated.

In enacting this law New York State has the honor of leading the country in this particular form of legislation, and its example will do much to stimulate similar action next year by other Legislatures. The members of the Legislature and Gov. Hughes deserve the fullest commendation for placing this regulation on our statute books.

Permit me, furthermore, to express the appreciation of our committee for the assistance rendered by your paper in this matter.

GEORGE A. HALL,
Secretary New York Child Labor Committee.

PELHAM BAY PARK.

Advantages for Recreation, but No Means of Getting There.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Various letters have appeared in your columns in reference to using the public parks for recreation during the coming Summer. Central and Van Cortlandt Parks are limited, and being under cultivation, afford but little opportunity for the masses.

Pelham Bay Park, on the other hand, consists entirely of uncultivated land. The natural advantages, rolling meadows, numerous and large trees, situated on the water, with bathing and boating facilities, contains everything that is desirable. Its size, too, it seems to me, makes it an ideal spot for those who can only take an occasional day off. At present it is not accessible except at a price which to many is prohibitive. I would suggest that the city build a dock and that a line of steamboats be run from the east side of the city. This would give a pleasant sail of about thirty minutes. I do not know what the cost of a round trip would be, but it would not be much. Doubtless some of our societies would aid in furnishing transportation.

Railroads as Philanthropists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Periodically comes the wail of the G. P. A.'s and the sage Presidents that commutation business is carried on at a loss. Yet practically every railroad bringing commuters into New York issues the most alluring literature, picturing in glowing colors the delights of suburban residence, and seeking to induce the city dweller to build a home along its line. The road presided over by the astute Mellen moves heaven and earth to prevent construction of the Port Chester Railroad, exclusively a commutation railroad, and is now spending a few odd millions to complete the Port Chester's old-time rival. A few years ago the Erie maintained a special suburban bureau designed to attract commuters to its lines. Truly, what great philanthropists we have in our midst! 'Tis well they remind us so often of their charity!

SUBURBAN.
New York, May 23, 1910.

A Commuter's Observation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

President Mellen says that on the whole his road has done pretty well, but that the commuting passenger part of it has been done at a loss, and therefore commuters must pay more, as he is unwilling to figure all the business the road does as a whole. Apparently, therefore, freight is that part on which the road has made its money. Will the road therefore make corresponding freight reductions? I do not think so.

Wants Them "Done Into" Books.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you let me say in THE TIMES that it will be too bad if Mr. Roosevelt's speeches abroad are not published in a book, not only as a memento of their special occasions and a souvenir of his trip, but as a constant source of inspiration to all who would possess them in this form. Also, in book form, the literature that has been published in your paper of King Edward since his death—giving an insight into many things, including the personalities of the late and present King, anecdotes, and situations. Would this not be another fitting memorial of an able and beloved monarch? Another tribute, charming and instructive?

Trimming the Figure.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At that trial Bezinski testified that Spitzer had not endeavored to approach either himself or Parr in an endeavor to hush up the finding of the piece of "corset steel" in one of the seventeen weighing machines.—NEW YORK TIMES.

The use of the "corset steel" by the Sugar Trust was quite consistent, as its purpose has always been to "trim the figure."

The Tariff Lawler.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is only natural that the President should be compelled to give matters of detail, such as, for instance, the Lawler memorandum, to subordinates to digest and write for him. I think the public would be tremendously interested in knowing who was the Lawler who investigated the tariff schedule and pronounced the bill the best ever, &c.

SUFFRAGISTS' MEMORIAL.

The Plan to Observe Decoration Day for Departed Leaders.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mrs. Helen Kendrick Johnson objects to the plan of the suffragists to decorate the graves of departed advocates of votes for women on Memorial Day. Her objections are threefold: (1) That the day is set apart to honor the men who died in the war; (2) that Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony do not deserve to have their graves decorated; and (3) that the little suffrage banners which it is proposed to use are a profane travesty of the National flag.

The first objection is clearly hypercritical. Memorial Day was first set apart to decorate the graves of men who died in the civil war. Later the graves of those who died in the Spanish war were included, and now for years it has been the custom of families to decorate the graves of their own dead on that day, though the departed may have had nothing to do with the war.

As to the question whether Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony did good service to their country, I will quote Miss Ida M. Tarbell, who does not believe in woman suffrage. In her "History of the American Woman" she says:

> It was, and is, common to speak slightingly of her, [the early woman's rights advocate,] but it is uncomprehending. Certainly no woman who to-day takes it as a matter of course that she should study what she chooses, go and come as she will, support herself unquestioned by trade, profession, or art, work in public or private, handle her own property, share her children on equal terms with her husband, receive a respectful attention on platform or before Legislature, live freely in the world, should think with anything but reverence of these splendid early disturbers of convention and peace, for they were an essential element in the achievement. There is no home in the land which has not a better chance for happiness, no child which does not come into a better heritage, no woman who is not less narrow, no man who is not less bigoted because of the impetus their struggle and sacrifice gave to the emancipation of the sex.

As to the suffrage flag, with its four stars representing the four enfranchised States, it has been in use by the suffragists for years, and Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and Clara Barton have made speeches underneath it. If the authoress of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and the most distinguished living army nurse see nothing offensive to Old Glory in the suffrage flag, lesser patriots need not be more squeamish.

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

NEGLECTED GRAVES.

Bespeaks a Column for Soldiers in Old Bensonia Cemetery.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Citizens of New York will notice with pleasure that Park Commissioner Higgins, who has already done much to improve the condition of our park system north of the Harlem River, is turning his attention to some tracts hitherto forgotten or overlooked in his district.

Owing to the fact that these little reservations are ancient and abandoned burial places, their neglected condition has been for many years past a disgrace to civilization and to the good name of our city.

A conspicuous instance in point is old Bensonia Cemetery in the Bronx, now one of our new recreation centres. For the past twenty years it has gradually and by degrees lost all semblance of the purposes to which it was devoted, not a tablet remaining to indicate the uses to which it was originally consecrated.

Yet in its southerly portion still repose the bodies of 250 members of the Sons of Liberty, a patriotic and charitable organization of bygone days, and scattered around in the vicinity lie the remains of many of the residents of the former Village of Morrisania. As they can never be found or identified, respect for our dead and regard to public opinion should induce our local authorities to erect a column in one corner of this burial place, as was done in the case of the Hudson Street Park, upon which should be engraved a similar inscription:

"In memoriam the City of New York devotes to the service and comfort of the living this ground, formerly used as a burial place for the dead, whose names, though not inscribed hereon, are hereby reverently commemorated."

No Chemical Antidote for Alcohol.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some of the discussions of the Inebriate bill in the public prints tend to convey the impression that a pharmacopeal armamentarium would be an important adjunct in the State institutions proposed under this act.

The cultivation of a similar belief in the capability of those claiming to be possessed of such an equipment in private life has been a source of profit in innumerable ways for some time past.

The consensus of the best professional opinion is that we have no more potent remedy to offer the victim of the failing than that contained in the advice of Mr. Punch to those about to marry—"Don't."

The State may afford a cloister, a retreat, or a reformatory, where time, restraint, or moral suasion with physical betterment may hold out a hope for improvement, but in which no chemical antidote to this "disease" can be administered.

New York, May 24, 1910.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Theodore C. Weeks proposes utter annihilation of the letter "c" in this morning's paper, saying that "k" for the hard sound and "s" for the soft would do away with its use and be entirely satisfactory.

What does the gentleman propose to do with such words as "chess," "chair," "cherry," and—"chump"?

Age of Chivalry Is Here.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Who says that the age of chivalry is gone, and that New York men are not polite? I had an experience on Monday morning which is worth recording. I stepped into a crowded Subway train at the Grand Central Station, and at the very door was taken in charge, as it were, by an elderly man, who politely offered to escort me through the crowd. We came to a place in the car where a young man was occupying a seat. The elderly person said: "Sir, you will oblige me very much by giving this lady your seat." The young man rose, and, with a courteous bow, said: "I will give it the lady to please myself." I thanked them both and [illegible], too, for they both raised their hats.

A Dangerous Pastime.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me through your journal to call the attention of the police to the dangerous pastime of boys on the New York side of the Delancey Street approach to the Williamsburg Bridge. On several occasions while in an auto within a few blocks of said bridge the occupants were showered with stones and earth. Up to the present time, fortunately, there have been no disastrous results. If one of the missiles thrown were to strike and disable the chauffeur, it is difficult to say how disastrous the result might be not only to the occupants of the auto but also to the pedestrians in this densely crowded section.

JAMAICA BAY PLAN CONSIDERED ASSURED

Dock Commissioner Tells Guests at Law Dinner the City Will Do Its Part.

CHANNEL FOR SMALL SHIPS

First Move in Improvement Work Will Be to Prepare for Barge Canal Traffic.

To mark the progress made in the plans to develop Jamaica Bay as a supplementary port for New York a dinner was given last night at the Imperial, Red Hook Lane and Fulton Street, Brooklyn, to Congressman Charles B. Law by the Jamaica Bay Improvement Association. In his speech Mr. Law confessed that the plan had until lately been regarded by most people as a dream, but he pointed out that at last co-operation had been obtained with the United States, the State, and the city authorities, so that the matter had come within the realm of possibility.

The Federal authorities have already granted for the deepening of the channels in the bay a sum of $250,000, which will be handed over as soon as the Secretary of War is convinced that the local authorities are willing to shoulder their share of the task. The State has passed an act handing over for this purpose its riparian rights to the land under water in the bay, and the city has already agreed through its Sinking Fund Commission to make a grant of some $1,000,000. The Board of Estimate will consider this grant in the next few days, and the speech of Dock Commissioner Calvin Tomkins last night was construed as meaning that so far at any rate as Mayor Gaynor was concerned there would be no hitch when the proposal came before the board.

It was explained last night that it is expected that ultimately a channel 30 feet deep and 1,500 feet wide will be dredged in the bay and that immediately the work is undertaken a channel 18 feet deep and 1,000 feet in width will be constructed. This the advocates of the plan believe will be quite adequate to take care of any of the tramp steamers plying to and from this port. Special reliance is put on the pressure to be put on the dock capacity of Manhattan as soon as the Erie Barge Canal is completed. It is figured that the large craft used on the canal will have no room for docking in Manhattan, and will be quite stanch enough to face the passage around Coney Island into Jamaica Bay, which already the barges of the Street Cleaning Department, which carry refuse to Barren Island, can accomplish with little difficulty. Moreover, it was said that the State Canal Commission had in contemplation the cutting of a canal from the East River to Flushing Bay, which would make the projected harbor still easier of access to the Erie Canal boats.

Henry A. Meyer, President of the Germania Real Estate and Importing Company, who was the toastmaster, in proposing the health of Congressman Law said:

"The proposed improvement means more than the building of docks and piers. It forever assures to New York pre-eminence as the principal port of entry into this country. It is estimated that by 1950 the population of the city will reach 10,000,000, and when we consider that we are the greatest manufacturing centre of the United States, we can understand the great and wonderful advantage of an improved Jamaica."

Dock Commissioner Calvin Tomkins began his speech by announcing that he was speaking for Mayor Gaynor. He said that the municipal officials had considered carefully whether in the condition of the city's finances it was justified in making large appropriations for the Jamaica Bay project.

"It was decided," went on Mr. Tomkins, "that such an appropriation should be forthcoming at once, first, on account of the necessity of preparing a comprehensive plan for the development of the city; secondly, because the waterfront plan should dominate the entire street, park, sewer, and grade systems of the backlands.

"This vast district is now virtually a waste. The lands are cheap. The backlands depend on dredged material to convert them from swamp to upland, and if the city controls the shore front, it will completely control an enterprise with power to adapt it to the best uses now and for future generations. The city can here effect a vast improvement with every prospect of getting the return of its investment from the improvement itself."

Mr. Tomkins went on to speak of the importance of taking advantage of the offer of Congress, which has included an item for $250,000 in the pending River and Harbor bill to be expended "when the Secretary of War is satisfied that the City of New York is prepared to undertake its part of the general plan for the improvement of Jamaica Bay."

Congressman Law, in returning thanks for the honor done him, declared that there was not the slightest chance of success unless the Federal, State, and municipal Governments all acted together.

"This plan," he said, "has too long been regarded as an iridescent dream or the insincere pretense of the man seeking political preferment. Now it is as near completion as the drawing up of a plan for a subway."

He pointed out how the United States Government had agreed to dredge the channels and the city to build bulkheads and piers and the State to surrender its rights to lands under water, as long as all the parties concerned did what was their duty. This he believed they would now do. A bronze tablet was presented to Mr. Law containing a map of the bay as it will be, it is hoped, when it is a part of the port of New York, and a record of the legislative steps taken in Congress, the State Legislature, and the Board of Estimate in furtherance of the plan.

MAMMY.

(It has been proposed to erect in Washington a statue in memory of the old Southern negro Mammy.)

Dear brown hands that smoothed with care
The tiny frocks and rumpled hair;
That gathered scattered toys from where
They were left strewn on floor and stair!
(Swing low, sweet chariot!)

Dear homely face, so patient grown
In furrows from the cares she'd known—
The cares of others, not her own—
While the long years had backward flown!

Dear heart, so loyal, loving, true,
To all the children as they grew
From babyhood to youth, and knew
Their infant world from Mammy's view!

Her voice melodious, soft and low,
Had caught the crooning ebb and flow
Of wild sea currents as they go,
'Neath wind and sunshine—wistful, slow.

So quick to sympathize and teach—
Wisdom, not knowledge, was her reach;
Prompt to reward or punish each
Good deed or error; quaint of speech!

Nature's own guiding rod she bore;
And taught us all her race's lore
Of truth and legend, and a store
Of marvelous things undreamed before!

Not hers to question things that be;
Content to hold her life in fee,
She had the simple faith to see
The Wonder and the Mystery.
(Swing low, sweet chariot, low, low!)

ACTORS' FAIR NETTED $110,000

$40,000 of Sum Received from Benefits—Daniel Frohman Re-elected President

The net profits of the recent fair of the Actors' Fund of America will amount to about $110,000, said Daniel Frohman yesterday at the annual meeting of the fund, held in the Gaiety Theatre building. Of this amount nearly $40,000 was received from benefits and subscriptions arranged for by E. L. Erlanger, National Chairman of the Benefit Committee. The profits of the preceding fair were about $75,000, which also included the money received from benefits.

The principal business of yesterday's meeting was the election of officers for the ensuing year and the reading of financial reports. Daniel Frohman was re-elected President, Joseph R. Grismer, Vice President; F. F. Mackay, Second Vice President; Henry B. Harris, Treasurer, and Frank McKee, Secretary. The trustees elected for the year were Al Hayman, Henry W. Savage, Joseph Brooks, James O'Neill, Edwin D. Miner, Charles Dickson, William Courtleigh, and Charles Burnham.

Addresses were made by Mr. Frohman, Mr. Mackay, and Thomas A. Wise. Mr. Frohman, after stating the results of the recent fair, said that nearly half of the profits were due to the actors and actresses themselves by subscriptions, donations, benefits, and participation in the fair.

It was reported that the fund has thirty-four old actors and actresses at the home on Staten Island, and is supporting more than eighty sick and helpless players in different parts of the United States. The expenses were shown to exceed $43,000 a year, with an income of about half this amount.

LEOPARD LOOSE IN CENTRAL PARK

Scores of Women and Children Flee in Terror from the Lion House as She Escapes.

BAGGED BY KEEPER SNYDER

His Invention for Gathering in His Jungle Friends Lands the Animal Back in Her Cage.

For the first time in twenty-four years a leopard got the better of its keepers in the Central Park lion house yesterday. Hattie, a leopard whelp 7 months old, worked her way through the bars on the top of her cage, and for a moment was in a position to attack any one of the hundred or more men, women, and children who were looking at the animals.

Hattie's first notion was to have a visit with her mother, and she set off across the tops of the cages. She might have had it, too, had it not been for the keepers. The screams of the women attracted them from all directions, and George Sichert, the first to arrive, quickly shut the leopard in and shut the women and children out. Next he ran from window to window, closing them, while he sent another keeper for "Bill" Snyder, who was busy preparing food for the animals in the basement of the Arsenal building, a short distance from the lion house.

"Leopard's loose!" was the cry that Snyder heard as an excited keeper burst in on him. Snyder at once grasped a large canvas "catching bag" which he had constructed especially to capture animals that crouch before they spring.

With this long-handled bag in his hand he ran for the lion house and was admitted alone, while two other keepers came in after they found that Snyder was unable to corner the leopard by himself.

When he arrived, Snyder found Hattie on the top of an empty cage, which separated that in which she was kept from her mother's. The mother leopard was watching her approach with solicitous purring and "meowing" as the leopard stepped from rung to rung.

Mike, the Puma, a large animal housed in a cage directly opposite, eyed what was going on, and became interested. Dick, the father of Hattie, and Nick, a full-grown brother, lay in cages adjoining that of Kitty, the mother. They too took an interest in the approaching family reunion, and began to let themselves be heard.

Snyder at that point interfered by springing up the side of an empty cage to the top, and rushing at the leopard with his bag, hoping to throw it over her head before she could leap. Hattie took one glance at the keeper and then turned tail to find what safety there was in flight.

At the far end of the series of cages was a hippopotamus tank, from which the animals had just been removed to an outdoor tank for the Summer. The indoor tank was dry and it was a sheer drop of twenty feet from the cage top to the bottom of it. Hattie hesitated on the edge, but the man with the big catching bag was close behind her, and she let go.

"She took the air just like one of the blooming aeroplanes, and lit as pretty as a picture," said Keeper Sichert in describing the event afterward.

Snyder with his sack followed the leopard into the hippo tank, and thought for a moment he was going to catch her there. But she darted past him as he advanced with the bag in front of him and leaped eight feet in the air to the top of a partition leading to the keeper's dressing room. There were plenty of dark corners there, and Hattie leaped from the partition top into one of them.

Snyder finally found her crouched, and when he got near enough she sprang as he expected she would. But handling animals of all kinds in every sort of situation is the business of Snyder, and he has been at it since long before he handled a full-grown leopard in a more serious escapade a score of years ago.

The leopard landed fairly in the net, and in an instant Snyder had pulled the top shut and twisted it over the handle so that she couldn't find the opening and get out again.

Spitting and protesting as she went, Hattie was dragged past the cages of all her relatives to her own, and then she was set free, but within the bars that had held her secure through the seven months of her existence.

Snyder and his assistants stretched a section of woven wire over the top of Hattie's cage so that she could not again slip out between the bars.

"She was such a little thing," said Snyder, "that we kind of forgot she was growing and getting stronger, and that one of these days she would go climbing up the sides of her cage to the top and slip through. The bars were almost close enough together to hold her—almost but not quite. In another month or two she will be perfectly safe inside 'em."

For five minutes after she gained her freedom the leopard whelp was in easy reach of an open window, through which she could have leaped to the general freedom of Central Park among a host of mothers with baby carriages and go-carts. She weighs forty pounds, and, in contrast to her older brother, also born in the Park zoo, has always been pleasantly disposed, while her brother has been sullen and sulky and has quarreled with all who have come near him.

EZEKIEL, SCULPTOR, ARRIVES.

Here to Attend Unveiling of His Statue of Jefferson in Charlottesville.

Cavaliere Moses Ezekiel, the sculptor, arrived here yesterday on the North German Lloyd liner Berlin to unveil the bronze statue of Thomas Jefferson, which he has given to the University of Virginia in Charlottesville. The statue is a copy on a smaller scale of the one executed by Mr. Ezekiel for the city of Louisville, Ky. It will cost nearly $40,000 when the granite base is completed and placed in position.

In an interview with a TIMES reporter the sculpter said that he had not been in this country for three years, owing to the pressure of work at his studio in Rome. "I shall go to Virginia for the unveiling of the Jefferson statue after I have seen my relatives in Cincinnati," said he.

"I completed the statue two years ago and have since been working on the bronze statue of Stonewall Jackson for the State House grounds in Charleston, West Va., which is shortly to be unveiled, as well as the memorial to the Confederate prisoners who died on Johnson's Island in Lake Erie."

When asked about his recent work Cavaliere Ezekiel said that he had modeled a statue in clay and finished the plaster work of a statue of Napoleon at St. Helena. "When I return in the Fall to Rome I expect to have the marble block ready for me to work upon, and hope to have it finished by next Spring." He added that his old studio in the baths of Diocletian had to be given up on account of the exposition which is to be held in Rome next year, and he was having a new studio erected on the banks of the Tiber, near the city.

Moses Ezekiel was born in Richmond, Va., and was graduated from the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va., in 1866 and removed to Cincinati in 1868. He has execcuted statues for the principal cities in Europe as well as the United States, and has been decorated by the German Emperor, the late King Humbert of Italy, the present King Victor Emanpel, and other foreign rulers.

DR. R. O. STEBBINS DEAD.

Chairman of Committee of Arctic Club at Time of Cook-Peary Controversy.

Dr. Roswell Otis Stebbins, arctic explorer, traveler, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Arctic Club of America at the time of the Cook-Peary controversy, and friend of the discredited explorer, and doctor of medicine and dentistry, died at his home, 4 East Forty-third Street, yesterday from Bright's disease, from which he had been a sufferer for the last eight months.

He only returned from Florida, where he had been since March, on Monday, and the suddenness of the termination of his illness came as a surprise to his many friends. Dr. Stebbins was 6 feet in height, and before his illness, weighed 200 pounds. His illness, however, caused a gradual wasting away, and at the time of his death, his weight was not more than 90 pounds.

Dr. Stebbins was born at Wetumpka, Ala., in 1855, and throughout his life had shown great power of endurance. When he was in his twenties he rode on horseback from the City of Mexico to Seattle, Washington, taking six months to do the trip, and in that period only slept one night in shelter.

He obtained a degree of surgery in Alabama and about thirty years ago he came to New York. After a few years he took up dentistry and was graduated from the New York College of Dentistry. He gradually dropped his medical practice and for many years he had been recognized as one of the foremost dentists in the city.

EARL OF STAMFORD DEAD.

William Grey Only Member of House of Lords Who Was Newfoundlander.

LONDON, May 24.—The Earl of Stamford died to-day. He was born in St. Johns, N. F., April 18, 1850, a son of the Rev. William Grey, and Harriet, daughter of the Rev. Francis Henry White. In 1895 he married Elizabeth Louisa Penelope, daughter of the Rev. C. Theobald, rector of Lasham, Hants. A son, Lord Grey Groby, and a daughter, Lady Jane, survive.

William Grey, ninth Earl of Stamford, was the only member of the House of Lords who was a native of Newfoundland. The peerages held by him date from the beginning of the seventeenth century. King James I. conferred the barony of Grey of Groby in 1603 upon Sir Henry Grey, son of Lord John Grey, and only nephew of that Marquis of Dorset and Duke of Suffolk, who was the father of Lady Jane Grey, for a few days Queen of England.

The earldom of Stamford was conferred upon the grandson of the first Lord Grey of Groby, though he had been a Parliamentary commander during the civil war, and one of the judges to sign the warrant for the execution of King Charles I.

Jean Joseph F. O. Toussaint.

Jean Joseph Frederic Otto Toussaint, who died at his residence, 321 West Seventieth Street, on Sunday, was born in Hanau, Germany, in 1828, of an old Huguenot family and came to this country in 1854. In 1858 he became a member of the firm of Graeffe & Co., a banking and gold exchange concern. At the beginning of the war he formed the firm of Toussaint & Kollstede, which conducted for many years an extensive gold and exchange business. Four years ago he retired from active business. He was prominent in German social, musical, and singing circles, and devoted much time to music. He is survived by a widow and three sons, C. Otto, Alfred E., and Herman E.

The rallying Yankees were rallied upon by the Chicago White Sox at American League Park yesterday, and by a spirited batting assault on Jim Vaughn in the ninth inning the score was tied 5 to 5, and there it remained while the teams battled along until darkness stopped the tussle at the end of the twelfth inning. It was the first call of the season from the Chicago team, and 10,000 fans were there, expecting to see the Yanks add another to the string of seven wins. Chase's men have been so skillful of late at making whirlwind finishes that the crowd stayed until dark to see them do it again. Chicago was stubborn and decided otherwise.

Chicago did little with Vaughn's pitching until the ninth inning. In the eighth there was a warning when the Sox slammed out a couple of long hits, but in the ninth they collected four vigorous bangs and pulled up on even terms with the enemy. Up to that time the Yanks looked like comfortable winners. They hit Smith for long hits and played wide-awake ball. The work of Hal Chase, which is always tiptop, was especially quick and brainy yesterday. In the fifth, with two down and a runner on second, Zeider tore a whistling grounder toward Roach. Roach made a wide throw, but Chase speared it with his gloved hand, with his left foot barely touching the base. Hal was first up in the next inning, and he slammed out a two-bagger to right, made a daring steal of third while the Sox looked on in wonderment, and pushed himself home on a squeeze play with Roach. It is little incidents of this sort day after day that lead the populace to the conclusion that Chase starts to play ball where most of them leave off.

There was lots of fine baseball on tap, such as numerous rifle-ball pegs by Laporte. Tannehill, who was at short for the Sox, turned his right ankle running to cover second base in the fourth, and had to retire. Blackburne, the high-priced infielder, who did dazzling work with Providence last year, took his berth, and he, too, cleaned up the earth around short, besides depositing a neat bunt in an out-of-the-way place.

Pat Dougherty almost shot the ball right through Vaughn's torso in the second. He slammed a liner right at the second button of the big pitcher's shirt. Vaughn couldn't see it coming, but he doubled up like a jack-knife and held it tight.

Cree was safe in the second when Gandil fumbled his grounder. He went to third on Austin's double to centre, and scored on a passed ball. Austin doubled again in the fourth, and went to third on Sweeney's out. Vaughn drew a pass, and Austin tallied on Hemphill's drive.

The Sox found Vaughn in the fifth inning. Purtell doubled to right and Blackburne laid down a spunky bunt, Purtell going in on Block's out, Austin to Chase. In the fifth Chase doubled, kidnapped third, and was home before the Sox gained consciousness. Chase shot a hot grounder to Smith in the seventh, and it carromed out of reach. Roach walked, and a glorious three-base slam by Birdie Cree brought both runners across the pan. A double by Collins in the eighth was stretched into a run when Dougherty rocked the ball a terrific jolt to centre for three stations.

With the ninth coming, the score was 5 to 2 and with New York on the heavy end, all the folks were hurrying home, thankful that here at last was a game played in the regular nine innings. But hold, all is not over. You forget that the White Sox can rally just as the Yanks did all last week.

The first evidence of this was when Purtell singled to right. Blackburne grounded to Chase, and Purtell was forced at second. Block singled, and Scott sent out a two-bagger which scored Blackburne and Block. Zeider kept up the fusillade and scored Scott with a nice tap to centre. Collins fanned and Gandil flied to Wolter, ending the agony, but the score was tied.

Scott then relieved Smith on the slab, and he passed Laporte, with one down. Frank was caught trying to second-story second, and Roach walked. There was just a wee bit of hope that Cree might repeat on the three-bagger. He didn't, though; he fanned.

From the ninth to the gloomy end Vaughn settled down, and Chicago didn't get a single hit more. Scott was pretty tight himself, and although Stallings sent in Gardner, Mitchell, and Knight as pinch hitters, a repetition of the rallies of last week was nothing but a futile dream. Roach got on in the eleventh on Purtell's error. He got around to third, but the necessary bingle was missing.

Tailenders Defeat Leaders.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—St. Louis won to-day's game from Philadelphia, 6 to 1, the visitors knocking Morgan off the rubber in the fifth inning, when they made seven hits and scored five runs. Lake puzzled the home team at all stages, except in the seventh inning, when two hits, a wild pitch, and a sacrifice fly enabled Philadelphia to escape a shut-out. Capt. Davis of Philadelphia was benched for disputing a decision on a called strike. The score:

SUPERBAS BLANK BRESNAHAN'S TEAM

Pitcher Bell Was Invincible, While Victor Willis Could Not Check Brooklyns.

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—Brooklyn administered about the worst defeat that Roger Bresnahan's Cardinals have experienced since they got into their winning stride two weeks ago, when Manager Dahlen's men to-day shut them out 6 to 0. Bell was the chief stumbling block for the Cardinals, who could find only five hits off his delivery in nine innings, and these were so widely scattered that they never threatened to do any damage.

Manager Bresnahan picked Victor Willis to defeat the Superbas, but in his choice he made a mistake, for the visitors pounded him safely ten times, he giving way to Rieger in the ninth inning. The score:

HERMANN BEATS YOUNG.

Good Sport at Fairmont Athletic Club's Free Show.

Billy Hermann outpointed Terry Young in the main ten-round bout at the Fairmont Athletic Club last night, the occasion being one of the regular "free shows" given by President Billy Gibson to those members who have paid their annual dues in advance.

There was, in addition to this go, a fine programme, and all of the bouts were either very hot affairs or else intensely amusing. It is simple truth to say that many a worse card has been seen in this city at high prices. The evening passed without a dull moment, and what better could be asked?

In the semi-final, "Badger" O'Brien, who has just arrived from England, made his American début in the six-round semi-final go, when he faced Jimmy Moran and gave him a pretty good lacing. This was a remarkably clean fight, the referee having absolutely nothing to do throughout the eighteen minutes the men were in the ring.

"Kid" Murray, who was willing and tried very hard, was put into the ring for six rounds with "Young" Ahearn, perhaps better known as the "perpetual motion kid." They put up about as amusing a mill as has been seen for a mighty long time. Ahearn went down in the first round from a hard right to the jaw, a novel experience for him, who is usually so elusive that his opponents can't begin to land on him.

"Kid" Williams and Dick Miller smiled their way through six rounds. They scratched, slapped, hugged, and pushed each other and, in fact, did everything but bite and hit. One was a fisherman by trade and persisted in using his arms as if they were bamboo rods; the other works on a stone crusher and stepped all over his opponent.

Mike Carroll and Johnny Hayes started the stag in a four-round bout, but it lasted only one round, with Hayes doing a Marathon sleep act from a hard right to the stomach.

Fordham Catholic Club Games.

The annual field day of the Fordham Catholic Club took place yesterday at Poe Park, Fordham. The games were attended by a large crowd, who cheered the winners. The feature was the running of the half-mile race, which was won by A. Manley after a hard sprint. The summaries:

60-Yard Dash, Sub-Junior.—Won by Morgan Callahan; Jerome Laverty, second; Herbert O'Brion, third. Time—0:07 4-5.
60-Yard Dash.—Won by Joseph Lee, (scratch;) A. Manley, (3 feet,) second; Robert Callahan, (3 feet,) third. Time—0:07 1-5.
220-Yard Run.—Won by James Timoney, (scratch; Joseph Lee, (4 yards,) second; tie for third between William Morrison and Robert Callahan, (both with 5 feet handicap.)

FIGHT PROMOTERS WIN WITH POLICE

Permit to be Granted to Broadway A. C., Where Jeffries-Johnson Bout Will Be Held.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—The first definite step in the campaign waged by representatives of the churches against prizefights in general in California and against the Jeffries-Johnson contest in particular was made to-day when a delegation of prominent preachers and their legal advisers appeared before the Police Committee of the Board of Supervisors to protest against granting a permit to the Broadway Athletic Club to conduct a boxing contest on July 4.

John L. Herget, formerly a middleweight prizefighter known in the ring as "Young Mitchell," and now a City and County Supervisor, sat as chairman of the committee.

A recommendation was made by the committee to the Supervisors that the permit be granted to the Broadway Athletic Club, under the auspices of which Jeffries and Johnson will fight on the National holiday.

The Rev. William Rader, the Rev. A. C. Bain, and Attorney J. E. White took the leading part in voicing the protest of the church people.

Chairman Herget informed the delegation that the Jeffries and Johnson fight would merely be a scientific boxing exhibition, and would be countenanced as such by law. When the clergymen referred to the scheduled event as a prizefight and to Jeffries and Johnson as prizefighters Herget objected, "Jeffries has never been in a fight in his life." Herget invited the "whole church federation to be present at the next fight."

"I think you will find that our objection to this prizefight business is really more serious than you admit, Mr. Herget," declared the Rev. Rader.

"Reverend, I must object to your saying that we are going to grant a permit for a prize fight. This is to be merely a boxing exhibition," said Herget.

"Is Jeffries a prizefighter or a boxer?" asked Mr. Rader.

"A boxer," said Herget.

"Then he is not a fighter at all?"

"Not in my opinion," Herget replied.

"And he has never fought?" the preacher queried.

"He's contested," Herget ventured.

"Well, in my opinion the affair is intended to be a prizefight, and the permit should not be granted," concluded Mr. Rader.

"It certainly is not to be a picnic."

"I must disagree with you again," reverend," said Herget. "This contest is to be conducted strictly under the Marquis of Queensbury rules, rules laid down by a gentleman and peer of England. These rules govern all boxing contests here. A prizefight is a fight with bare fists. It brings in wrestling and other things, and it is sometimes as rough as football."

The committee then decided to recommend the granting of the fight permit.

Billy Delaney has at last done what many persons predicted he would do in revenge for Jeffries' failure to make him manager. He has agreed to supervise Jack Johnson's training and to act as Johnson's chief second in the Fourth of July fight.

Delaney visited Johnson's quarters to-day and had a long conference with the champion. He promised to visit Johnson's quarters nearly every day and to give Jack all possible hints on training and boxing. As Delaney knows Jeffries better than any one else this is a distinct acquisition for Johnson.

SLOOP SHIMA LAUNCHED.

Morton F. Plant's New 48-Foot Racer Takes to Water at Bristol.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 24.—The Shima, a racing sloop of the forty-eight-foot class, built for Morton F. Plant, former owner of the schooner yacht Ingomar, was successfully launched at 8:45 o'clock this mornings at Herreshoffs at Bristol. Nat Herreshoff is to give her a trial under sail next week. The Shima is the first racing sloop built at Herreshoffs the past Winter. She was put over board at high water from the south shed of the Herreshoffs.

The new racer is a boat designed and constructed to sail in the forty-eight-foot class of sloops, of which Avenger, famous for several seasons past in the hands of Capt. Robert W. Emmons, 2d, was one of the speediest. There are also the Humma, Altair, and other craft of the size to fit comfortably into the forty-eight-foot class, but the Shima will be at the top of the class, and if there is anything to allow on account of greater measurement, it will be for the Plant craft to give time allowance. She has a larger sail area by several hundred square feet than the Avenger.

The general dimensions of the Shima are as follows: Length over all, 76 feet; length on the load water line, 53 feet 6 inches; breadth of beam, 14 feet 6 inches, and draught, 15 feet 5 inches.

The craft is of the keel type, with a hollow midsection, a short underbody, and moderate-length overhangs. In fact, the Shima is built to the limit of the New York Yacht Club rule of measurement, with big area of canvas. The method of construction was on the improved Herreshoff style, and the yacht is composite in construction, having steel frames and wooden planking. She has a small rail rising above the line of waterways, and will be steered with a tiller. Her top sides are painted a dark green.

Capt. John Barr, a nephew of Capt. Charles Barr, the former skipper of cup defenders, is the sailing master, and both Capt. Barr and his crew are in Bristol, helping make the boat ready for tuning up for racing this season. The builders and a few friends watched the Shima take the water. Her mast was stepped to-day.

Eastern Trade Golfers Play.

Devotees of the driver and iron affiliated with the Eastern Trade Golf Association mustered thirty strong on the links of the Wyagyl Country Club for their annual Spring tournament yesterday. The main event, an eighteen-hole medal play handicap, was won by E. H. Chasmer with an 84 net, assisted by a ten-stroke allowance. There were three other net prizes, won by E. C. Molby, C. M. Brisse, and Stephen Roberts. J. B. Garfield would also have won a net prize, but as his 87 was the best actual he contented himself with taking the gross score medal.

There was also a special competition against bogey, the prize being won by P. H. Seward, who finished 1 up. The winner's handicap was 15. Two teams tied for first place in the four-ball competition, H. F. Hadden and J. B. Garfield, with a card of 82—0—82, and P. H. Seward and A. H. Pearson, with 102—20—82, but as Garfield had already won a prize in the handicap, his team retired in favor of the other.

COOPERSTOWN TEAM WINS.

Defeats Rumson by 13 to 10 in Polo Match at Van Cortlandt Park.

Cooperstown had quite the better of Rumson in the second polo match for the Squadron A cups yesterday afternoon at Van Cortlandt Park, the final score being 13 to 10. The Rumson four earned only two goals, one by Charles Sabin in the first period and another by R. C. Lawrence in the sixth period. Despite the fact that there were supposed to have been eight periods played, through some misunderstanding there were only seven periods of the regulation length. The players maintained that they had played the full eight periods, an dsaid that they had used their eight ponies, but the scorers proved they were wrong, with only seven periods tallied. The extra period, however, was not played. Whether this will have any bearing on the play for the cups is a question which was not answered yesterday, some stating that as the full game had not been played it could not count as a game. Others, however, put forth directly opposite views.

The match was played before a big crowd of spectators, it being the largest gathering that has witnessed a mid-week match in a long while. One side of the field presented a big array of automobiles lined up, and directly behind were many people not so fortunate as to have such a point of vantage. Just why the automobiles were permitted to take the front row is a mystery, for those behind had difficulty many times in getting a good view of the field. The line-up and summary:

FOR THE FIRST TIME THIS SEASON, WE CAN OFFER IMMEDIATE DELIVERY ON SEVEN PASSENGER TOURING CARS OR CLOSE-COUPLED CARS.

The record of RAINIER cars in public competition speaks eloquently. The $10,000 City of Atlanta trophy was won by a RAINIER stock car, covering 200 miles in 173 minutes, averaging 70 miles per hour and establishing a new world's record. In endurance runs and reliability contests private owners have invariably been able to achieve perfect scores. In New York City, the most critical market in America, a list of over 800 RAINIER owners tells its own story.

A competitor recently said, "RAINIER may not always win, but, by George, he's always in at the finish."

That's due to endurance; the Atlanta performance proves the speed; the numerous perfect scores prove reliability; the 800 owners in New York testify to satisfaction.

As to beauty and luxury, the car must be seen to be appreciated. Call and look at the above new body design, which originated with us. Next year they'll all adopt it.

COLUMBIA OUT OF HARLEM REGATTA

Collegians Will Not Be Represented in the Memorial Day Races.

Contrary to the custom for a number of years, Columbia University has not sent in an entry for the Harlem regatta, which will be rowed Decoration Day.

The entries for the Harlem regatta were announced last night at a meeting of the Harlem Regatta Association, held at the West End Casino, and the total is below that of last season. A year ago the entries totaled fifty-six and this year they reach only to the forty-four mark.

Several of the events did not fill, notably the senior double sculls and the senior single sculls. It is evident from this that there is no boat club in the East willing to pit a man against Frederick Shepherd in the single event or against Shepherd and Fuessel in the double. Both men are from the Harlem Rowing Club and theirs was the only entry received in each class. The events have been left open, however, so that if there is a desire of any club to make an entry before the regatta it can be done. The intermediate eight-round shells also failed to fill, the New York Athletic Club eight being the only entry.

According to the programme as outlined last night, the first race will be the intermediate single event, which will start at 9:30 A. M. All of the morning races will be rowed down stream and the afternoon races up stream. The course will be from Fordham Heights to High Bridge. From 11:50 to 1:10 there will be an intermission for luncheon, and the opening race for the afternoon will be the quarter-mile dash. The handicap singles event will be rowed on as near dead water as possible, which will mean that it will take place at 3:20 in the afternoon. The entries are:

Junior Eight-Oared Shells—New York A. C. and Nassau Boat Club. Junior Four-Oared Gigs—Dauntless Rowing Club and Union Boat Club. Intermediate Eight-Oared Shells—New York A. C. Junior Quadruple Shells—Harlem Rowing Club, Nonpareil Rowing Club, Wanetah Boat Club, and Harlem Boat Club. Senior Four-Oared Shells—Arundel Boat Club and Malta Boat Club. Junior Double Sculls—Nonpareil Rowing Club and New York A. C. Intermediate Double Sculls—Union Boat Club and Harlem Rowing Club. Handicap Senior Singles—R. Krupp, New York A. C.; Frank Shea, Sheepshead Bay Rowing Club; Guy L. Belcher, Malta Boat Club, and Fred Fuessel and John J. Ryan, Harlem Rowing Club. Junior Single Sculls—G. Waldo Smith, Jr., Nonpareil Rowing Club; John Rogan, Sheepshead Bay Rowing Club; E. F. Dempsey, Wyanoke Boat Club, and John J. Hughes, Harlem Rowing Club.

He is champion heavyweight wrestler of the Academy and is tackle on the football team.

MIKE RYAN'S MARATHON.

Irish-American Runner Wins Race at Hamilton, Ont., in 2:49:19.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, Ontario, May 24.—Defeating a field of over thirty of the best Canadian distance runners, Mike Ryan of the Irish-American Athletic Club of New York, to-day romped home an easy winner in the second annual Canadian Marathon, and established a new record for the course, the distance of which is 26 miles 385 yards. Ryan's time was 2:49:19, while the record established by Cotter, last year's winner, was 2:51:53.

Ryan used excellent judgment in the early part of the race, and after covering the first ten miles he ran alone, finishing seven minutes ahead of the second man, Charles Cook of Hamilton. Fletcher of Toronto was third. The roads in parts of the course were muddy and rough, and Ryan's performance was a remarkable one.

A very fast pace was set in the early stages of the race, but Ryan avoided it and had little trouble in going to the front when ready. For winning the race Ryan will receive a free trip to England next Spring to compete in the English Marathon. He will also hold the challenge trophy for a year and get a gold medal and a number of special prizes.

Ryan was favorite, with Jimmy George, who won the Herald race here last Fall, a strong second choice. The winner was conditioned for the race by Johnny Hayes, the Olympic Marathon winner. He has had several offers to turn professional since his victory, but declares that he will remain in the amateur ranks.

WILLIAMS STRONG AT NETS.

Dartmouth and Wesleyan Survive New England Tennis.

BOSTON, May 24.—The fight for the New England intercollegiate tennis championship narrowed to-day to Dartmouth, Wesleyan, and Williams. The first two have two men each in the singles and will meet to-morrow in the semi-finals in doubles, the winner to play Williams for the title in that section.

Three matches in singles, all of them well contested, were run off during the morning, and Williams found a lively pair from Amherst in the doubles in the afternoon, each match going three sets. Wesleyan disposed of Bowdoin easily in the doubles. Summary:

Championship Singles.—Third Round Completed—S. B. Smith, Dartmouth, beat H. L. Corey, Amherst, 7—5, 7—5; W. B. Holton, Wesleyan, beat T. B. Parker, Technology, 11—9, 6—4; C. E. Bacon, Wesleyan, beat S. B. Benton, Williams, 3—6, 6—0, 6—2.

Championship Doubles.—Second Round Completed—Amherst beat Brown by default; Williams beat Tufts by default; Wesleyan beat Bowdoin, 6—3, 6—1.

Semi-Finals—Williams beat Amherst, 1—6, 6—4, 6—4.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Liquidation Active in Grains; Prices Drop—Provisions Show Late Weakness—Cotton Dull and Lower.

The wheat market broke about 1@2c a bushel for the active deliveries, showing some recovery from the low point, but closed decidedly unsettled. The early markets were steady, influenced by some rally in Liverpool, but this lasted only a short time, and when selling orders came on the market in volume there was quick response to the selling movement, and prices broke steadily, reaching new low levels for the decline, and a great many stop orders were uncovered. Some longs which have been fighting the market all the way down were reported throwing over a large line at the West. Weather conditions were fine. The rain has stopped, and temperatures were higher throughout both the Canadian and American belts. The Western reports were of dull and weak cash markets, although Chicago is still drawing wheat from other points for May delivery, and 600,000 bushels is reported in route from Duluth. The Chicago stocks showed a large gain in contract supply ready for May delivery. Bradstreet's visible decrease in the United States was 1,626,000 bushels; in Canada 952,000 bushels. The total world's decrease was 2,478,000 bushels, against a decrease of 3,931,000 bushels the previous week, and a decrease of 3,067,000 bushels last year. Southwestern markets were reported weaker, owing to the near approach of the harvest in the Far Southwest. Even with the decline in the day's market prices still are materially above an export basis. Cash wheat quoted: No. 2 red, Winter, $1.09, nominal, to arrive, cost, insurance, and freight; No. 2 red, spot, nominal, $1.10¼, free on board, afloat, for export; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.16, nominal; No. 2 hard, Winter, nominal, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, $1.00¾.

Corn was quite fairly steady early, but influenced in part by the decline in wheat, and by a decided improvement in the weather conditions, there was a little decline in the market. The temperatures have risen in the corn States, and the weather has become fair. These conditions are very desirable for the completion of planting, and the early development of the crop. The receipts are reported increasing, and cash corn is lower at the West. Bradstreet's visible decreased 2,159,000 bushels, against a decrease of 2,453,000 bushels the previous week. Cash corn quoted: No. 2, 67c, nominal, elevator, domestic basis, and steamer nominal.

Oats were weak and made new low levels for the distant deliveries. There has been a decided change in the attitude toward the new crop deliveries, and prices have declined rapidly as crop conditions have improved. Liquidation has been persistent and active, and crop reports are of a decidedly favorable nature. Cash oats quoted: Natural white, 45@47c; white, clipped, 45@50c.

Provisions were quiet, with prices ruling fairly steady in the early trading. Later the market became weak and affected by the decline in grain, and there was a general selling movement in the afternoon. The close was rather unsettled. May lard was decidely weak.

COTTON.

In cotton it was a day of small trading and not much change in values. There was a little decline during the morning. Prices lost approximately 10 points. Later there was a steadier tone, but not much change in values. There was quite a little selling in the first hour, but there came in some support from the bull interests, and the pressure let up. The news was rather bearish. The receipts were heavy locally, and there was further increase in the warehouse stock, while the weather conditions have materially improved all over the belt. The past week has been a wet, cool one, and clear, warm weather is now much to be desired.

A steadying factor in the market was the announcement that 42,000 bales more of freight room had been taken since Saturday, largely for Liverpool. The negotiations since Saturday morning have been 80,000 bales, and in all since this outward movement began 152,000 bales, about 100,000 bales of this cotton having been for Liverpool. Whether this cotton has been actually sold or not, it is being moved out of the market, and in that way ceases to be a factor in the local situation.

The market late was quiet and rather heavy. The deliveries were 3,100 bales, making 278,000 bales this month. Sales were 3,014 bales. The average guess of 47 members of the Cotton Exchange for the Government crop report showing is 80.4, against 81.1 last year, and a ten-year average of 81.4. Southern spot markets unchanged to ⅛c decline.

New York spot cotton quiet, 5 points decline. Middling uplands, 15.35c. Middling Gulf, 15.60c.

COFFEE.

Coffee was inactive, with total sales amounting to 12,500 bags, and after opening about steady unchanged to 5 points decline, an easier feeling developed and final prices showed a net loss of 4 to 10 points. The European markets were also a little easier, Havre closing unchanged to ¼f decline, while Hamburg was ¼ pfennig lower. In Brazil there was no change, and there appears to be very little new business, as firm offers are usually above a working basis. The visible supply of Brazilian coffee in and afloat for the United States is 3,083,443 bags, compared with 3,509,302 last year and 3,515,583 two years ago. Spot coffee quiet and barely steady, 8⅝c for Rio No. 7.

DEFAULT IN PAYMENT ON IRRIGATION BONDS

Underwriters Ask Holders for 90 Days' Grace to Make Good on an Installment.

EXPECT TO TAKE UP ISSUE

Money Used for Development of the System Instead of Meeting Bond Obligations.

The Denver Reservoir Irrigation Company, one of the most important of the private corporations engaged in irrigation work in the Western States, which has put out bonds maturing in installments, did not pay the first installment of principal on the bonds when it fell due on May 1. The Trowbride & Niver Co., through which the bonds were placed, issued this circular to the holders of the bonds under date of May 4:

> To the Holders of Denver Reservoir Irrigation Company 6 Per Cent. Bonds of the 1910 Maturity:
>
> The Denver Reservoir Irrigation Company has, since May 1, 1907, promptly paid all interest payments up to and including May 1, 1910. The irrigation company has just been disappointed in securing some municipal irrigation district bonds which it was to receive for the sale of a part of its water, and it becomes necessary pending the receipt of these bonds and their sale, which will put the company in funds, for the irrigation company to be granted a little time in order to secure these district bonds and effect their sale.
>
> Will you, therefore, please consent that there will be an interval of about ninety days' time in which payment of principal will not be made, but about that time it is expected that the matter will be cleared up?
>
> Trusting this may be satisfactory we are,
> Very truly yours,
> TROWBRIDGE & NIVER CO.

The holders of the bonds, a representative of the firm said, have consented to await the period of payment indicated in this circular.

Conferences have lately been held looking to an arrangement for the payment of the principal of these bonds which matured on May 1. The conferences were said yesterday to be still under way. The bonds would certainly be taken up, it was said, before the end of the ninety days. The total issue of the Denver Reservoir Irrigation Company's bonds is $1,500,000, but not all of these, it is understood, have yet been issued. It was proposed originally, it appears from circulars, to issue $100,000 of the bonds of the May 1, 1910, maturity, but there are said to be outstanding only $57,000 of these.

The bonds carry 6 per cent. interest and were issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000. They were placed with the purchasers at par and interest. The Denver Reservoir Irrigation Company was formed to construct dams and other water works for the irrigation of large tracts of land in Colorado, much of it lying close to Denver. The construction work is nearly completed, and part, at least, of the company's system is in actual operation. A circular issued by the Trowbridge & Niver Company says of the organisation of the company.

> The Denver Reservoir Irrigation Company came into existence through the consolidation of eight other irrigation companies owning over 100 miles of canals and ditches, nine finished reservoirs, decreed rights and priorities and filings, from the South Platte River and six other streams that drain the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, for direct and storage water sufficient to irrigate 125,000 acres of land. Some of the consolidating companies owned old water rights, canals, and reservoirs, which have been in continuous operation for many years.

The fact that the bonds which matured on May 1, 1910, were not paid, although the interest due on all of the issue was paid on that date as usual, it is said, was due to disagreements in the company, which resulted in its failing to make provision for the payment of the bonds, the money being used instead in further construction work.

JUNE SETTLEMENTS LARGER.

It will require about $85,000,000 to meet dividend and interest payments falling due in June, according to estimates made by The Wall Street Journal. This is about $5,000,000 more than the necessities the same month last year, $9,000,000 more than in June, 1908, and $10,000,000 more than in June, 1907.

Last December, which corresponds with next month as a semi-annual period, the dividend and interest disbursements were about $95,000,000, and in the same month in 1908 the estimate was $105,000,000.

Dividend payments, it is reckoned, will make up about $40,000,000 of the total and bond interest $45,000,000.

Railroads will be, of course, the heaviest payers of interest, and industrial and miscellaneous corporations the largest dividend payers. Interest on railroad obligations to be paid next month is estimated at $32,778,000, against $27,933,000 in June, 1909, and dividends on industrial and miscellaneous stocks at $29,653,000, against $30,642,000 in the same month in 1909.

GARAGE OWNERS ORGANIZE.

Charles D. Chase Appointed Manager of New Auto Association.

Fully one half of the garage owners in New York City are members of the Garage Association of New York, and several applications for membership were received yesterday at a meeting of the association at the clubrooms, 102 West 107th Street. Only garage owners are admitted to membership, and the directors are very much encouraged over the outlook.

The object of the association is to eradicate the existing evils of the garage business, which have multiplied during the past few years, and to protect the owners of automobiles from the present troubles that beset them. The association disclaims any desire to conflict with any existing organization, but desires to better the conditions in the garage industry, not only for the benefit of its members, but also for the benefit of owners patronizing the various garages in the association.

Charles D. Chase was appointed manager at yesterday's meeting, and the following directors were appointed for the ensuing year: G. Edward Shaw, Columbus Garage; D. L. Dean, Uptown Garage; W. D. Carleton, Co-operative Garage; I. D. Siegel, Taxicab Auto Company; C. S. Bader, Imperial Garage; W. S. Horner, Harlem Automobile Company, and Austin P. Palmer, Knickerbocker Garage.

What Doctors Say About
ALCOHOLISM

Continual and abnormal indulgence in whisky, beer or wine eats away the stomach lining and creates a morbid craving for a stimulant. No amount of "will power" can restore the tissues burned and seared by alcohol.

Practically all physicians advise medical treatment in cases of chronic Intemperance. Hospitals and sanitariums all over the land treat patients for the disease of Drunkenness, many of them using the Oppenheimer Treatment, recognized as the best and most effective Treatment for Alcoholism.

Write, call or phone for free literature (mailed sealed, in plain envelope) about the Oppenheimer Treatment. Absolute secrecy and privacy are assured.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Dull and Firm—Call Money Rates, 2¾@3¼ Per Cent.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE LOWER

Demand Sterling Reacts from Monday's Rise—Wheat and Cotton Continue to Reflect Liquidation.

Owing to the violent rise in demand sterling here and in Paris on Monday, and the concurrent advance in money rates in London, the attention of the financial community was naturally fixed upon the money and exchange markets yesterday. Both here and in Paris sterling fell sharply and in London discounts were considerably easier. In London the belief seemed to prevail that the Bank of France will release gold, but actual engagements were not reported up to the close of business. The present firming up of money in the English capital seems to be due to temporary causes connected with the settlements, and, to a greater extent, with the belated payments of the Government taxes. In international banking circles there is no expectation that the London situation will lead to further gold shipments from this side. Our own money market continues to display every indication of ease, call money rates, as was entirely natural in view of the very dull Stock Exchange session, dropping before the close of the day to 2¾ per cent.

Trading on the Stock Exchange dropped back into the narrow grooves followed by it in most of last week's sessions. The volume of sales ran to about 250,000 shares, and the movement of prices, while firm throughout in contrast with Wednesday's course, was, nevertheless, so restricted that at the close of the day advances, while fairly general, were almost wholly fractional. Union Pacific and Southern Pacific might be considered the only features of the day's business, for the reason that, with one or two minor exceptions, they were the only issues to score gains of above a full point or more. Various reasons, mostly of a familiar kind, were offered in connection with the rise in these shares, but it was probably true of them, as of most other stocks, that a modicum of buying, coupled with the covering of short commitments by speculators unwilling to let open accounts stand over in so dull a market, explained the character of the day's market. News of moment to financial markets was altogether wanting; the various reports regarding the acquisition by the Pennsylvania Railroad of a larger interest in the New Haven, some stories going so far as to make this increase tantamount to control, were met with official statements that the transaction really represented nothing more than the purchase by the Pennsylvania of a moderate block of New Haven stock in addition to its past holdings, and that in this connection a second representative of the Pennsylvania would be accorded membership in the New Haven Directorate in the near future. Another reported railway deal—that which had the Canadian Pacific buying the Ontario & Western—was definitely finished off by the unqualified denial issued by the President of the Canadian Pacific. As was the case on Monday, and, in fact, throughout last week, the weakness of both grain and cotton markets formed the most important and gratifying development of the day. The continuation of nearly ideal growing conditions in the wheat and cotton country is apparently proving disconcerting to the speculative interests which have so long been in full control of these markets, with the result that rather hasty liquidation is apparent in both. One of the most acceptable consequences of this liquidation is the relief which has been very obviously afforded money markets in the West, and to some extent in the Southwest.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Tuesday.

Monotony characterized trading conditions on the Consolidated Stock Exchange most of the day. Prices, however, held very firmly, with little or no commission house liquidation showing in any quarter of the list. When previously bearishly minded operators attempted to cover they found stocks in scant supply on the floor. Sales totaled 49,865 shares, with the list including forty-five different stocks.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Nipissing Again Active and Strong, While General Market Moves Sluggishly.

NEW RECORD FOR THE YEAR

Price Goes to 11⅞ and Closes at the High Level After Transactions of 12,000.

The activity in Nipissing which became marked with the opening of the week continued yesterday, and sent the stock to a new high level for the year at 11⅞. After opening at 11⅛ the price rose consistently on heavy trading, and a total of 12,000 shares was reported, the close being at the high level of the day. Kerr Lake and La Rose Consolidated reflected in a minor way the strength of Nipissing, each gaining 1-16, the former on transactions of 2,700 and the latter on sales of 4,000. Among the coppers there were a number of fractional gains, but trading was in small volume and price changes confined within narrow limits.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—To-day's local Stock Exchange session was just about the most stagnant of the year. If it had not been for some traces of activity in such arbitrage shares as Reading, United States Steel, and Pennsylvania there would have been practically nothing doing. During the first hour, for instance, just eleven shares of Lehigh Valley changed hands, forty Rapid Transit, seventy-seven United Gas Improvement, and no Cambria Steel or Union Traction whatever. Not a share of Union Traction appeared on the tape until five minutes before the close. The hurried offering of about 1,000 shares of that stock in small blocks caused a drop in the price from 48 to 47½.

Protests Against Rate Increases.

Organizations of shippers are coming forward with objections to the rate increases proposed by the railroads, and are advancing the same arguments against a rate increase at this time as were advanced two years ago, with the exception that the hard times argument so successfully used then against the rate increases, which many of the railroads wanted to make at that time, is not now included among the reasons advanced by the shippers against an increase. There appears to be the same conflict between the views of the shippers and those of railway men as there was in 1908. The railroads contend that no other line of business is content with the profits the railroads make, and the shippers are retorting that the railroads are more prosperous than any of the industries. The shippers say that if the railroads really are in need of an increase in rates it ought to be easy to prove it by figures, but the very figures which the railloads cite to prove that they need an increase in rates are said by the shippers to show that, after all, the railroads are prospering greatly on present rates. Shippers and railroads agree on the figures, but there the agreement ends. What the figures mean is altogether another question.

Poor Report on Crop Weather.

A pessimistic report from the grain-growing States was issued by the Weather Bureau yesterday in its regular weekly account of conditions, and in its present gloomy state of mind, the Street was quite ready to see the fair crop prospects of the season vanishing. It seems that there has been cloudy and rainy weather over the corn-growing States, which has interfered with the preparation of the soil, and continued cold has held back areas already planted. Further in the Spring wheat region there has been frost and freezing weather and lack of precipitation, which has "prevented the satisfactory progress of vegetation." About the only good news of the week's weather comes from the cotton belt, where needed rain has fallen plentifully.

Spring Wheat Harvest Soon.

Oklahoma, Texas, and California Winter wheat fields will be ready for reaping within the next week or so, and in each of these States better yields than ordinary are expected. In Oklahoma, indications are for a crop of 20,000,000 bushels, the State ranking next to Ohio as a producer. Conditions on May 1 were 87, and have been growing better since. Texas and California will each harvest over 1,000,000 bushels.

Janus Gates.

Market gossip yesterday would give John W. Gates the power of seeing in opposite directions, like Janus of old, if it is to be reconciled with his own expressed views to the ship news reporters yesterday. While he was talking at the steamer, as he departed for Sweden, of his optimism about commercial and financial affairs in this country, and hoping that when he came back he would find the present apparent depression had taken flight, those who watch the market were finding his hand in the selling of stocks. Much of Monday's selling was credited to Mr. Gates, and the same theory was generally credited yesterday in connection with the selling. The report of his spoken optimism left the Street wondering if he hadn't something more to sell.

No Central Leather Dividends.

No action was taken on the common stock dividend by the Directors of the Central Leather Company yesterday, the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred of 1¾ per cent. being declared. Prior to the meeting President Hoyt had said for publication that he had not replied to a letter addressed to him by representatives of from 17,000 to 20,000 shares of the common stock, in which information as to the dividend outlook had been asked nearly two weeks ago, because he thought it should not have been sent to him personally. The Stock Exchange house which made the inquiry retorted yesterday that its request for information had been made to Mr. Hoyt as President. In admitting to a correspondent in Boston the failure of their attempt to extract what they considered legitimate information from the company, the brokers had these things to say of the policy of silence: "All corporations should be frank with their stockholders, so that they will not be deceived by misleading or unauthorized reports. The stockholders are the owners of the business and are entitled to full information in regard to the condition of their property. It seems to us that the day has gone by when corporations can ignore stockholders."

Tickets for an automobile have been sold on the "raffle" plan on the floor of the exchange. This method of raising money was common during the blue months of 1907.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Brokers in La Salle Street opened their eyes in astonishment to-day when a quotation of 50 was chalked up on the blackboard for Street's Stable Car Line preferred. This was 40 points below the last previous sale. No official explanation was forthcoming, but it was common talk on the Street that the new management had found the affairs of the company in worse shape than anticipated, and it was rumored that dividends on both the preferred and common stock would probably be passed until the company had managed to strengthen its financial position. Common fell at one time to 9, or 2⅛ points under the close yesterday, afterward recovering a point. The preferred subsequently sold at 55.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Happenings of a Day in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, May 24.—Money was in strong demand to-day, and discounts were easier.

The stock market developed some irregularity under further realizations and fear of dear carry-over rates to-morrow, home rails, copper shares, and kaffirs showing the most loss. Consols eased a fraction and rubber shares weakened owing to the lower prices realized at to-day's auctions. Mexican rails and Grand Trunks were dearer.

American securities opened slightly higher and hardened on light buying. The Chicago receivership and the uncertain outlook in Wall Street checked progress, but New York support in the afternoon more than recovered the midday loss. The market closed steady.

Competition at the opening of the fortnightly auction sale of raw rubber in Mincing Lane to-day was decidedly slack, and several lots had to be withdrawn. Some orders were in evidence for fine crape rubber, however, and this grade went as high as 10s. 5¾d. per pound, or 7d. below the price prevailing at the sales two weeks ago.

Bar silver steady, 24⅝d per ounce.

Money, 3¾@4 per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 3¾@3⅞ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for three months' bills is 3 11-16@3¾ per cent.

Gold premiums are quoted at Madrid 6.85, and at Lisbon 10.50.

PARIS, May 24.—The general tone of the Bourse to-day was quiet.

Three per cent. rentes, 98 francs 80 centimes for the account.

Exchange on London, 25 francs 28½ centimes for checks.

BERLIN, May 24.—The Boerse was quiet and weak early to-day, but strengthened later. Baltimore & Ohio, however, declined sharply.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 51½ pfennigs for checks.

Money, 3½ per cent.

Private rate of discount, 3¼ per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 24.—Dullness characterized the trading in the local market to-day. The undertone was strong, and prices showed a fractional advance for the day. Butte Balaklala was the special feature, advancing over two points. Amalgamated gained a point, Nipissing was in good demand and sold up to 11⅞. The close was strong and at about best prices of the day.

PENNSYLVANIA STOCK DEAL.

Holds $6,000,000 of New Haven Stock—To Get Another Director.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, which for years has held $1,000,000 par value of the stock of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, has lately increased its holdings to $6,000,000. President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven made this statement on the subject yesterday:

> Four or five months ago the Pennsylvania Railroad acquired about 50,000 shares of New Haven stock. They have acquired none since that time, so, therefore, their total holdings now amount to about 60,000 shares. As this is a little less than 5 per cent. of the total New Haven stock outstanding, the reported control of the New Haven by the Pennsylvania is a piece of asininity.
>
> After the acquisition of this 50,000 shares by the Pennsylvania Company they requested that they be given further representation on the Directorate of our road. We are perfectly willing to do this, and another Director, representing their interests, would have been added at the last meeting had there been a vacancy. When there is a vacancy a Director representing the Pennsylvania interests will be chosen. This is far from meaning, however, that the Pennsylvania controls the New Haven.

This statement by Mr. Mellen was supplemented by Vice President Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who said:

> It is true that the company has some stock which it has absorbed from time to time, but no such a thing as control was ever contemplated. The East River tunnel will be in operation about Aug. 15, and the North River tunnel will come later. It will be about three years before the line of the New York Connecting Railroad Company can be built, and also before the New Haven will get its trains into the Pennsylvania terminal by way of bridges extending from the Bronx across Hart and Ward Islands.

Ethical Culture School

Central Park West and Sixty-third St., New York City
Kindergarten, Elementary
High School and Normal Departments
Founded thirty-one years ago by Felix Adler.

To meet the growing demand for places in our Elementary School, steps have been taken to accommodate about forty more pupils than formerly in Grades III—VII inclusive. Parents wishing to take advantage of this enlargement should apply without delay.

The following are some of the noteworthy features.

A Country Camp, to promote outdoor life and interest;
Wholesome athletic sports and games;
Co-education, with its advantage in approximating to the family type;
School Festivals under the direction of Mr. Percival Chubb;
Direct and specific ethical instruction by Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott;
The democratic ideal maintained by a system of scholarships which afford the advantage of contact with companions in different financial circumstances.

In the upper grades and the High School, classes do not exceed 20 pupils; thus the instructors are able to give proper attention to individuals. By means of a broad course of study, a large and well trained teaching staff, and a complete modern equipment in all departments, the School prepares students for various life callings as well as for any college or technical institution.

The School has certificate privileges in colleges where certificates are accepted.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Lively Bidding for Subway Loop Property—Trinity Church Corporation to Improve Canal Street Plot—Heights Apartment in $350,000 Deal—Bronx and Suburban Sales.

The offering by the city through the Public Service Commission of six plots of property acquired for the building of the Centre Street Subway loop for connections with the new bridges and improved transit facilities in Brooklyn drew a large number of bidders to the Vesey Street Real Estate Salesroom yesterday afternoon. The sale in some respects was in the nature of an experiment, and there was considerable curiosity among operators to see what effect the fixing of an upset price upon each of the six plots offered would have in the bidding.

Although but three of the plots were sold the sale proved to be a distinct success. Bidding was lively and the greatly increased prices obtained over the upset figures occasioned general surprise. The three plots sold were restricted to $370,000, and they brought $536,000. In all of the properties the city retains an easement covering the surface and subsurface areas of the Subway. The fact that the Subway has been constructed so that buildings of ten stories or over might be built upon the lots evidently contributed to their value as an investment.

Joseph P. Day was the auctioneer. The first plot, at the southeast corner of Centre and Walker Streets, about 17,500 square feet, went to John H. Hallock after active bidding for $251,000, the upset price being $175,000. The next plot, for which the upset price was $150,000, sold equally as well. It is on the west side of Centre Street, between White and Walker Streets, 237 by 65, and was bought by Samuel H. Stone and Heilner & Wolf for $210,000.

For the northeast corner of Canal and Centre Streets, 169 by about 50, William A. White & Sons made the highest bid—[illegible],000—which was $30,000 over the upset price.

The three remaining parcels were withdrawn. Auctioneer Day said that the sale of these properties would be readvertised probably for some time early in the Fall. In the meantime the Public Service Commission will try to make some changes in the Subway plan at one or two points to make the properties more attractive for improvement.

The sale was interesting as showing that there is a market for properties of this character, even though subject to easements.

Another Trinity Church Improvement.

William A. White & Sons have consummated another twenty-one-year lease for the Trinity Church Corporation, which will erect an eight-story and basement fireproof building at the northwest corner of Canal and Sullivan Streets, (being 417, 419, and 421 Canal Street, and 2 and 4 Sullivan Street,) for Peter A. Many Bronx Parcels at Auction.

By order of the executors of the estate of Cecelia Chateauneuf, deceased, Bryan L. Kennelly will sell at absolute auction to-day in the Exchange Salesroom in Vesey Street eight lots on the southeast corner of 231st Street and Carpenter Avenue, one half block west of White Plains Road. The lots will be sold in two plots, 100 by 114 each, the easterly plot having a two-story building thereon; also at the same time a large plot, being entire front on Robbins Avenue, St. Mary's Street, and Port Morris branch railroad, size 141 feet on Robbins Avenue by 171 feet on St. Mary's Street; also the property known as 2,490 Valentine Avenue, 88 feet south of Fordham Road, consisting of plot 100 feet on Valentine Avenue, running through to Tiebout Avenue, with attractive dwelling, coach house, and garage; also, vacant plot on west side of Arthur Avenue, 35 feet north of 188th Street, to be sold in two parcels of 50 by 112 each; also southeast corner of 182d Street and Ryer Avenue, a plot 99 by 95 by irregular, with frame stable thereon; also entire block front north side of 182d Street, from Ryer to Valentine Avenue, plot 201 by 63 by irregular.

Fireproof House in Garden Show.

Occupying the centre of Madison Square Garden, a dwelling of terra cotta hollow tile blocks is one of the leading features of the Real Estate and Ideal Homes Exposition, which closes to-night after a very successful week. The building is designed to show what can be accomplished by this new system of construction, a method which has come into wide use in the last two or three years. It is the exhibit of the National Fireproofing Company. This specimen home was put up in the Garden in forty-six hours. It is put together in every way just like a regular home, except that sections are left unfinished so that visitors may see how the job is done. The walls are made of hollow terra cotta block placed end on end, the hollow spaces forming continuous air chambers from top to bottom. These dead air spaces make the walls non-conductors of heat, with the result that the house is warmer in Winter and cooler in Summer than houses of brick or frame.

Receiver of Rents Appointed.

Justice McCall of the Supreme Court has appointed John J. Mackin receiver of rents of 237 East Fifty-sixth Street, a five-story tenement, pending a suit brought by Ethel L. INVEST YOUR MONEY AT LONG BEACH

The Beacon Light of the Real Estate World

Long Beach

Stands Out Brilliantly Among the Real Estate Opportunities of To-Day

It is a beacon light which will guide you safely into the port of financial success.

Great fortunes have been made in New York City real estate and by timely investments at Coney Island and Atlantic City. But it would be hard for the moderate investor to make big profits in real estate there now because he would have to "buy at the top."

The way to make money in real estate is to buy low and sell high.

LONG BEACH is an absolutely unparalleled real estate opportunity. Investigate your present opportunity at this great seaside city which is springing up as if by magic to be a bigger and better Atlantic City right at New York's doors (35 minutes from Herald Square by the Pennsylvania Tunnel).

PLAN NEW AVENUE IN CITY'S HEART

Mayor Would Cut an Artery Between Fifth and Sixth Avenues to Relieve Congestion.

PUTS COST AT $40,000,000

Property Owners, He Thinks, Would Bear This in Return for Increase in Values.

Mayor Gaynor has in the last few days explained to callers at his office a plan he has in mind for opening a central avenue, 100 feet wide, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues from Eighth Street to Fifty-ninth Street, involving a money outlay, it was estimated yesterday, of not less than $40,000,000.

The Mayor is said to have had his thoughts turned to the subject of the congestion in Fifth Avenue on one of his walks through the city. While in Fifth Avenue between Forty-second and Twenty-third Streets, it is said, he was impressed by the way in which the thoroughfare was choked up with automobiles, carriages, and other vehicles. The sidewalks were also much overcrowded, in his opinion. Then he was said to feel that the blocks between Fifth and Sixth Avenues were too long.

He is said to have said later that he could not understand why so important a work as opening up a new street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues had not been undertaken years ago, and then expressed the opinion that the city plan for Manhattan was laid out exactly wrong from the beginning. He agreed with others that instead of having the cross streets so close together as they are at present there should have been at least twice as many avenues as we have now.

Favors the Cheapest Route.

Mayor Gaynor also told his callers that it was not his idea that the proposed new thoroughfare should necessarily be cut through the exact middle of the section between Fifth and Sixth Avenues and Eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets, but might be run nearer to Fifth Avenue or Sixth Avenue, according as the cost was found to be less. A survey by skilled engineers to determine the least expensive route, in the Mayor's opinion, would be one of the first steps to be taken. The average length of blocks between Fifth and Sixth Avenues is about 800 feet, though many of the blocks are more than 900 feet.

It is not the Mayor's idea, either, that the cost of the project should fall on the city itself. He made it plain that the cost of opening up new streets should not be charged up to the city, and ordinarily was not so charged, but was assessed against the property owners who would be most benefited. He said that in his judgment the increase in real estate values in the section adjacent to the proposed thoroughfare would be such that the owners of the property would doubtless be willing to meet all the expense of the improvement, heavy as it might be. The city itself would also reap a harvest in the increased taxes which this property would pay, for it was estimated yesterday that the immediate valuation of the land alone on the new street would be more than double what it is now.

For a thoroughfare 100 feet wide running fifty-one blocks—that is, between Eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets—the city would have to acquire 102 sides of streets, fifty-one on each side. This would mean the acquisition of 408 lots, each twenty-five feet front. In other words, eight lots, 25 by 100, would have to be acquired in each of the fifty-one blocks between Eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets. Estimating the average cost of each lot at $100,000, the outlay for property alone would be $40,800,000.

The Mayor has been at some pains, it is said, to impress on those with whom he has discussed the subject that while he was for the improvement he did not want to take any hasty steps, and above all things he wanted to hear what the people themselves thought of it.

One of the greatest drawbacks to cutting the avenue the Mayor proposes, it is said, is the large number of costly buildings that will have to come down. Nelson P. Lewis, Chief Engineer of the city, spent an hour or more yesterday afternoon tracing a line through the section affected which would spare the greatest number of important buildings and at the same time give a direct street. These are some of the best-known structures, it was found, which the proposed thoroughfare would cut into if it was run directly through the middle of the tract:

St. Francis Xavier College.
The Belden Building.
Siegel-Cooper Company building, (rear end.)
Cluett Building.
Stern Brothers' dry goods store.
Trinity Chapel.
The Astor offices.
Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre.
Hotel Breslin.
Gilsey House.
Wallack's Theatre, (rear end.)
Astor Court Building.
Engineering Society Building.
New Public Library, extreme rear end, and Bryant Park.
West Presbyterian Church.
Racquet and Tennis Club.
Yale Club.
New York Yacht Club.
Harvard Club.

Besides these buildings many dwellings, including Senator Depew's house at 27 West Fifty-fourth Street, would be affected.

As it is the Mayor's plan to have the new street run, if run at all, so as to avoid as many of the more important buildings as possible, it seemed to some of those looking into the matter yesterday that not all of St. Francis Xavier College would have to be sacrificed, and very little of the Siegel Cooper Building. In fact, the Siegel Cooper Company would have a front on the new street at apparently very little loss of floor space.

Many Costly Buildings Involved.

The street if run even near the middle would cut Stern Brothers' Building completely in two, and little would be left of Trinity Chapel. When Broadway at Twenty-eighth Street was reached Mr. Lewis, the city engineer, seemed to think some way could be found to save several of the important buildings or create, in triangular lots or flatirons similar to that of the Times and the Fuller Buildings, business sites which would do much to make up for the property cut into. It seemed to be difficult, however, to save both The Breslin and the Gilsey House.

By turning the avenue a little toward Sixth Avenue, or by not putting it in the middle of the block, it seemed possible to save both the Engineering Society Building and the Engineers' Club, and this would save also the rear of the new library. But the street would tear right through the West Presbyterian Church, and apparently neither the Yale, New York Yacht, or the Harvard Club could be saved.

Allan Robinson, President of the Allied Real Estate Interests, 165 Broadway, who was recently appointed to the Mayor's Congestion Commission, said last night that he couldn't discuss the Mayor's proposal until his organization had considered it.

Joseph P. Day, the real estate auctioneer of 31 Nassau Street, said the matter was one of the most far-reaching and important suggested in a long time, but he would be unwilling to express an opinion either for or against it, he said, until he could think it over.

It is well known that Richard Croker was an enthusiastic advocate of the new avenue.

Mayor and Other Officials Disapprove Ninety-sixth Street Plan.

The Mayor held a hearing yesterday on a bill to turn West Ninety-sixth Street from Central Park to Riverside Drive into a parkway, and indicated that he would veto it. When Park Commissioner Stover declared that he knew nothing about the bill, the Mayor closed the hearing abruptly and declared: "We'd get along much better if these tinkerers would not go to Albany with bills before the City Government has passed upon them through the proper officials."

FINDS LOST FUNDS OF THIRD AVE. LINE

Service Board's Accountant Uncovers $10,000,000 Proceeds Which Receiver Couldn't Trace.

CAME FROM A BOND ISSUE

Money Went Largely to Buy Securities of Subsidiary Companies, and Was Charged in Operating Cash.

The long concealed history of the $37,560,000 of bonds which the Third Avenue Railroad Company issued in connection with its lease to the Metropolitan Street Railway in 1900 began to be told yesterday afternoon at the hearing before the Public Service Commission on the reorganization plan of the Third Avenue Railroad. This plan is before the Public Service Commission with the backing of the Bondholders' Reorganization Committee, and this committee, through its counsel, William D. Guthrie, objected strenuously to the introduction of the evidence.

The commission, however, insisted in bringing it out through Marvyn Scudder, the accountant who has been employed by the commission in its traction investigations heretofore.

Mr. Scudder was called to the stand as soon as the hearing opened and despite the continual protests of Mr. Guthrie the commission had him tell how he had dug into the books and vouchers of the Third Avenue and the Metropolitan Street Railroads and unearthed the history of this famous bond issue, concerning which Receiver Whiteridge of the Third Avenue has said that he could not find trace of the proceeds of about $10,000,000 of the bonds.

Mr. Scudder did not do much more than to get underway with his testimony yesterday. But the facts which he did bring out, presented in a voluminous pamphlet, may be thus summarized:

Out of the proceeds of $37,560,000 of bonds issued the sum of $23,169,307 was deposited with the Morton Trust Company to take up prior indebtedness of the Third Avenue Road, and the sum of $11,494,170 was placed also in the Morton Trust Company as a construction account for the subsidiary companies of the Third Avenue Railroad to the credit of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company as lessee.

Taking the first one of these items, it appeared from Mr. Scudder's testimony that $9,951,247 went to take up securities of subsidiary companies which the Third Avenue Railroad Company had purchased in connection with the creation of its floating debt prior to 1900; $549,075 went to pay interest on the notes which the Third Avenue issued for the purchase of these securities. An example of the basis upon which these securities were bought was furnished in the case of the Union Railway, in which the Third Avenue, on March 21, 1908, bought about 19,000 shares for $227.25 a share, involving a total exenditure of $4,808,554, for which there is no voucher. The market price of Union Railway stock at this time, according to Mr. Scudder, ranged between $190 and $210 a share.

Similarly, in the case of the stock of the Dry Dock Railway 11,287 shares were bought at $200 a share in September, 1907, when the market price ranged between $160 and $170 a share. Most of the remainder of the twenty-three-million-dollar item went to take up notes of the Third Avenue to the extent of $5,908,608 issued for miscellaneous purposes, which Mr. Scudder could not trace. There was one transfer of $240,000 to the operating cash of the Metropolitan Street Railway.

The item of $11,424,170, the other cash item placed with the Morton Trust Company, was increased by miscellaneous additions until it represented a construction account of $13,265,575. Of this $4,692,750 went to the Union Railway, $1,423,938 went to the Metropolitan Street Railway direct, and $42,481 went to the Dry Dock Railway. All of these amounts, Mr. Scudder found, were charged into operating cash.

Something more than $7,000,000 of the proceeds of the bonds appeared to have been spent on or for the Third Avenue Railroad proper, but even with respect to these items there were some uncertainties, as, for instance, a miscellaneous one of $906,252, which included $385,000 paid to the law firm of Hoadley, Lauterbach & Johnson. This legal expense, according to the vouchers, went in part to take up an old account, antedating 1900, and in part for the services of Edward Lauterbach in connection with the lease of the Third Avenue to the Metropolitan in 1900, and the formation by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of a syndicate to underwrite $35,000,000 of the bonds.

The accounts also show that $1,185,750 was paid through the Morton Trust Company to the Third Avenue Railroad Company for the account of the Union Railway Company. This money was expended from time to time by the Third Avenue, but the books of the Union Railway Company show no trace of its receipt by that corporation.

Mr. Scudder's testimony will be continued to-day.

METROPOLITAN SALE OPPOSED

Stockholder of Branch Line Files Objections with Special Master.

The report of William L. Turner, the Special Master, of the attempt made on May 12 to sell the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, its property, rights, and franchises, under the decree of foreclosure and sale obtained by the Guaranty Trust Company, was filed yesterday in the United States Circuit Court. It merely related to facts already published of no bid having been received and of the adjournment of the sale. With the report William Wallace Burnham, as a stockholder in the Central Park, North & East River Railroad Company, and in behalf of that corporation, filed a notice opposing the sale of the Metropolitan on the ground that the decree and sale are void and affecting to the discontinuance of the lease and operation by the Metropolitan of the Central Park, North & East River Company and others.

TO TAKE UP PLUMBERS' GRAFT

Whitman to Lay Charges Against the Old Board Before the Grand Jury.

District Attorney Whitman said yesterday afternoon that the Grand Jury would investigate the charge that some $15,000 had been paid to members of the official Examining Board for Plumbers up to last February, when the board then holding office was turned out for new members. The members of that board were John J. Moore, Bartholomew F. Donohue, and John J. Dunn.

The statement about this new kind of graft was made on Monday in the Third Municipal Court, where Henry J. Mehlkop, a plumber of 4,741 Richardson Avenue, Wakefield, was suing Moore and Donohue, with William F. O'Connell, for $300, which he said he had paid over to O'Connell to see that he passed the proper examination and was duly and officially pronounced a master plumber. That was last year. He didn't get through, and so he wanted his money back.

William F. O'Connell used to be a teacher in Coyne's National Trades School at Tenth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street, which has been out of business for eight or ten months. He said he got to know many plumbing students there, and had taken an average of $300 from forty-seven of them, one-third for himself and the other two-thirds for the members of the examining board, who furnished the questions and answers in advance.

O'Connell said in court that he had a book which contained the names of all the men who had paid graft to him for himself and members of the examining board. He could not be found yesterday at the address he gave in court. Nor could Moore and Donohue be found.

Boys and Girls to Show Their Handiwork in Brooklyn.

An exhibition of sewing and construction work of the girls and small boys of the elementary schools of Brooklyn and Queens will be held at 131 Livingston Street, Brooklyn, on the top floor of the Board of Education Building, from next Thursday evening through Friday, from 3:30 to 6 P. M., and from 7:30 to 9:30, to Saturday, May 28, when it will be open from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M.

Dr. Maxwell will make the opening address on Thursday evening. On that occasion nearly 300 girls, the average age being 14, will appear in dresses they have made during the term to wear in June at their graduation.

The complete course of study will be illustrated by the work of the children.

All kinds of full-size garments will be shown in large quantities, and groups of children will be seen sewing, weaving baskets, and caning chairs.

GATES SAILS, AN OPTIMIST.

Thinks Roosevelt's Return Will Clear the Political Atmosphere.

John W. Gates sailed for Europe yesterday on the Holland-America liner Rotterdam in an optimistic frame of mind about financial and commercial conditions in the United States. He said that on his return he hoped to find the apparent sentiment of depression gone.

"Politics seems to be mixed up here just now," said Mr. Gates. "But when Col. Roosevelt comes back next month everything will be straightened out, I guess. The cotton crop looks good and the growers will make money."

Mr. and Mrs. Gates will travel through Norway and Sweden, and then go to Carlsbad. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gates and O. C. Wells were also members of the party.

PROF. MYGIND HERE ON VISIT.

Comes from Copenhagen as Guest of American Medical Association.

Prof. Holger Mygind of Copenhagen, a well-known Danish physician, arrived here yesterday on his way to attend the medical congress to open in St. Louis early in June. He comes here as the guest of the American Medical Association, and will spend a week in New York, sightseeing.

"What I most particularly desire to see," said Prof. Mygind at the Hotel Gotham, "is American art. We know so little of it in Europe, and while I am in this country I mean to visit as many of the art museums and private galleries as I can. This is my first visit to America, and from what I have seen so far I have been greatly impressed."

The physician said he was in Copenhagen when Col. Roosevelt arrived there.

"I happened to be near the station when your ex-President arrived," he said, "and there were great throngs to greet the visitor. The Danes admired him very much. We all liked his straightforwardness, and he said a lot of common things which were good to remember. Everybody was sorry to see him go."

But when Dr. Cook's name was mentioned, the professor threw up his hands in apparent disgust.

"I do not wish to talk about Dr. Cook," he said. "He is a disgrace to Denmark as well as to America."

REA ASKS ABOUT SUBWAYS.

Pennsylvania Railroad Official Wants to Know About a West Side Line.

Samuel Rea, Second Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, had a conference with Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission yesterday morning in which he asked about the progress the commission has made as to plans for a west side subway system. Mr. Willcox told Mr. Rea that the commission was considering such plans, and that as soon as it got the contracts for the Broadway-Lexington Avenue off its hands it would take them up.

Fechheimer Becomes Fletcher.

Richard Fechheimer of 548 Fifth Avenue received permission yesterday from Supreme Court Justice McCall to assume the name of Richard Fletcher. Among the reasons assigned was that the name Fechheimer is unwieldy, and that he desires to avail himself in private life of his reputation as a writer.
